

TingL Contributors

Volume 27, Issue 2

PATRICIA LYNN BAKER

is the author of Creating a Learning Commons for the 21st Century with Design Thinking and a consultant for school library design, and participatory learning.

ANITA BROOKS KIRKLAND

is the chair of Canadian School Libraries and the former Consultant for K-12 Libraries at the Waterloo Region District School Board.

JENN BROWN

is a teacher-librarian and ESL/ISSP teacher at Castle Oaks Public School in the Peel District School Board.

MARY CHISHOLM

is a library technician with the Hastings and Prince Edward District School Board. She works in both an elementary and a secondary school library.

HOLLY DICKSON

graduated with a B.Ed. from Althouse College, Western University, and has worked at a municipal library for the past eleven years.

CAROLINE FREIBAUER

is a teacher-librarian at Assumption College School in Brantford. She is treasurer of The Association of Library Co-ordinators of Ontario.

TRISH HURLEY

is the teacher-librarian and STEAM teacher at Westacres Public School in the Peel District School Board.

LEAH KEARNEY

is on secondment from Toronto District School Board to TVO as an instructional leader in the Educational Partnerships department.

ALANNA KING

is an agent of change in the Upper Grand District School Board, where she is currently teaching English online and face-to-face.

DIANA MALISZEWSKI

is the teacher-librarian at Agnes Macphail Public School in the Toronto District School Board.

HEATHER MCTAVISH

is part of the Library Support Services team at Dufferin-Peel Catholic District School Board. She is a Masters of Education student at the Ontario Tech University.

SHELAGH PATERSON

is the executive director of the Ontario Library Association.

ANGELA
THOMPSON

is an English teacher at East Northumberland Secondary School in the Kawartha Pine Ridge District School Board, in Brighton, Ont.

KASEY WHALLEY

is a library and information technician at Notre Dame Catholic Secondary School in the Dufferin Peel Catholic District School Board.