A SPIRITUAL HUMBUG.

CURIOUS LETTER FROM MR. SOTHERS. Mr. E. A Sothern, who has made a repu of Lord Dundreary, writes a long letter to a Glasgow paper, in which he gives the following bits of his personal history :-"There is an article in the Spiritual Maga zine in which I am referred to. The main

They greated special privilege to be admitted to this magic hamber. Mr. Stuart at that period was better-known as Stuart the magnetiser, or magic-worker, than Stuart the actor.' The 'actor named Stuart' is now better known as the 'actor named Sothern.' lowing sufficiently illustrious precedents, I used an asssumed name when I entered on my profession, and I only resumed my own by the advice of my friend Mr. James Wallack. The 'party of spiritualists' was not composed chiefly of 'actors and actresses.' It would sity and interest, joined in a thorough, practical and exhaustive investigation of the tice and experiments further, we attained the capacity to execute feats much more remark-1-y able than those presented at any of the 'spiritual seances.' An American gentleman and myself took the part of the 'media;' the rest of the company assisted; and I do not hest-

We' did put Shakespeare and Garrick, and other valuable autographs; we did produce spirit-hands and spirit-forms; people did floate in the air-at least we made our audience really believe they did, which was quite sufficient for our purpose and theirs. We exhibited phenomena which were startling enough in all conscience, and we made our visitors believe in their reality. How we succeeded in doing this-how we made some of the most intelligent men in America believe that they really saw and felt what they only fancied they saw and felt-how we produced to the physical senses of the spectators-how, in fine, we did things which must have seemed to be, and what many of our visitors beclare; but I have not the slightest hesitation tual agencies. Yet professional and paid 'media' came and saw, and themselves avowed our superior power over 'the spirits.' . . "The object of this writer in the Spiritual Magazine has been to represent me as having exhibited 'spiritual manifestations' in America, and having exposed them here.
