OTTAWA, FEBRUARY 26, 1866.

We noticed the other day the suspension the Richmond Examiner, by order of General Grant. Subsequently we learned that Pollard, the proprietor of the paper, applied to the President, at Washington, for permis sion to resume its publication, explaining away any hostile intention in the objecti able articles. It appears as if this highhanded affair of Grant's had been over-ruled by President Johnson, as we find the follo ing in the Tribune of Friday : The following communication explains
