KILLING AND SCALDING HOGS .- J. Comfort, writing from Cumberland Co., Pa., to the American Agriculturist, gives his process of killing and scalding hogs, which has much to reconfinend it, as follows :- "I have frequent-I -thought of writing a word on the easiest, quickest and most humane manner of slaughtering hogs. I take any kind of a gun that will go 'loose,' load with say one-third charge Customs, as to the rate of discount to be allowed on of powder, and a plug of hardwood, about an American Invoices, which is to be in accordance in inch long and the thickness of the ramrod. | with the price of gold as represented by Exchange, | OCEAN STEAMSHIP CO. A common barrel kettle kept boiling, will keep the water in the scalding tub hot enough, by adding hot and taking time; all with little cost, little fael, little lifting, and the killing with little suffering to the animal. All things considered, this is the best mode I ever saw or used for killing, scalding and dressing hogs. VENTILATION IN BEE-HIVES.—Bees in winter do not apparently suffer from cold, even when I Italian and Amprior Marble, at prices from which the bottom board had fallen and Table and Counter Tops, which were exposed to the air, winter well: while others, carefully tended, lost thousands of bees, and yet both had sufficient stores. Hives made of thin boards are bad quarters for bees, unless well ventilated for the simple reason, that when such are exposed to the weather, they pare rapidly with their warmth in severe cold, and unless carried off by currents of air, the moisture from the bees condenses on the inside and then congeals, and this process will go on until the comb next the sides is involved, and the bees are huddled together in an ice house. When combs are thus frozen, or kept steadily exposed to an atmosphere of moisture for some time, they will mould whenever the weather becomes warm. It often happens that the principal portion of the honey is laid up in the outer combs, and if the e are frozen, the bees cannot get their food, and many thus starve with food, abundant, but locked up by frost. HINTS ABOUT SHEEP .- Keep sheep dry under foot with litter; this is more necessary than roofing them; never let them stand in mud or snow. It a ewe loses her lamb, milk daily for a few days. Let no hogs eat when the sneep-by no means in the spring. Give the lambs a little mili feed in time of weaning. Never frighten sheep, if it is possible to avoid it. Separate all weak, or thin, or sick from those strong and give them special care. Don't let sneep sport their wool with chaff or burrs. Cut tag tocks in early spring. For scours, give powdered alum in bran. IMPORTANT TO FRUIT GROWERS .-- At the last meeting of the 'Upper Canada Fruit Growers' Association the following varieties of fruit were achied to the list for cultivation Wagner and Sweet Bough apples and Early Recamond Carry. The White Antwerp Rispherry was struck from the list, the list for further trial.
