THE FISHERIES. AMERICAN PARTICIPATION IN CANADIAN FISHERIES.

(From a Special Report of W. F. Whitaker, Esq., Head of the Fisheries Branch of the Canadian Oceanic Landings Department.)

The next following figures, as well as those given in the return of June, 1864, (copied in Mr. Harvey's Essay, p. 7.) refer solely to fishing carried on within the limits of the Reciprocity Treaty.

Treaty. Americans were admitted. In other parts of the coast of St. Lawrence, United States vessels to the number of about 1,400 pursue depredations upon a previous Treaty.

UPPER CANADA. Although the terms of the Treaty were not applicable to the fisheries of Upper Canada, American vessels were admitted to the waters and shores of Lake Ontario, Erie, Huron and Superior.

GENERAL REMARKS. In Lower Canada vessels, American fishing vessels have been allowed further access to the waters and shores than a liberal interpretation of the Reciprocity Treaty would entitle them to.

Mr. Galt—Well, sir, we don't supply you with an ounce of coal from Canada. We buy $200,000 or $300,000 worth from you. And we import more than we sell to you of every article you treat as free or on which you put a low scale of duty.

Mr. Galt—If that were true, you would not buy from us so largely as you do have.

Mr. Galt—If that were true, you would not buy from us so largely as you do have.
