Still do the Hungarians resist the Austrian yoke. Still do Kossoths rise up. Still do the Magyars hold to their constitutional rights and fight the ground inch by inch against the slow but terrible invasion of their popular liberties and nationality. By the last mail from Europe we have the following account of the action of the Hungarian Diet:

"The negotiations between the Emperor of Austria and his Hungarian subjects do not make much progress. Indeed, it would hardly be too much to say that they have come to a deadlock. The Lower House of the Diet, as we stated when writing on the subject last week, must that the complete independence of Hungary should be recognized, that the laws of 1848 should be confirmed, and that a responsible Ministry should be appointed, before the relations between the kingdom and the rest of the Austrian empire are taken into consideration. The Emperor, on the other hand, in replying to the Address presented to him declares that the third article of the law of 1848, establishing a separate Ministry for Hungary, could not be maintained consistently with a proper treatment of common affairs; that other articles of the same law are equally objectionable; and that their re-establishment is impossible until they have undergone revision and amendment. The Emperor and the Diet have, therefore, taken up antagonistic positions; and nothing further can be done until one or the other gives way. We do not believe that Deak and his friends will make any concession on what they consider a cardinal point; and Francis Joseph is hardly more likely to yield. It is believed that His Majesty is of opinion that an appeal to the country would result in the return of a Diet more favorable to his views. In all probability, that appeal will, therefore, be made, and the present critical state of affairs will be prolonged for an indefinite period. We regret that this should be the case; but we certainly cannot blame the Emperor for resisting the extreme demands made upon him. Nor while we respect the stanchions with which the Hungarians stand by their ancient constitution and their historical rights, can we help thinking that under all the circumstances they would act wisely in tempering their firmness with conciliation."

The several companies of Volunteers called out for duty, marched through our streets on Saturday afternoon. It was considered by many, Volunteers and citizens, that this was preparatory to their return to their several localities. Such, however, does not appear to be the case, as we have not learned that orders have been received from headquarters by any of the officers commanding; but it may be inferred that as orders for the return of several companies in many of the principal towns of Upper and Lower Canada have been issued, not many days will elapse before similar orders will be received for our own district.

We have never been believers that any serious invasion by the O'Mahoney-Sweeney rabble of the United States would be made upon Canada, but we confess to some apprehension for the peace and security of the towns and cities on our frontier. It is so palpable that the grand object of the Fenian leaders is money, it was quite possible that any road which promised handsome loot might be undertaken by the mad and incited dupes of the wily schemers. Fortunately the prompt action of the government was nobly responded to by our citizen soldiers, and has been productive of evidence of how thoroughly sound is the loyalty of the Canadian people. The precautionary measures so wisely adopted by the militia authorities proved sufficient to meet the apprehended danger if they did not prevent the anticipated and blatantly threatened attacks of the Seventeenth of March. The thorough British spirit which has been evinced by the volunteers in the performance of a novel duty shows how thoroughly reliable in case of any emergency the ardor, determination and patriotism of our people. There was a time when the people of England somewhat doubted our willingness to defend our hearths and homes, and believed that our loyalty had no other foundation than the profits we derive from the connection with the parent States; that we were indispensible to incur cost or trouble in the defense of the Province, or in the maintenance of those relations which we were considered so greatly to undervalue. Much as we may deplore the occasion, vexations and costs as it has been to us, it has afforded the opportunity of proving to our friends at home that we are neither the dastardly to cringe before a threatening danger, nor the lukewarm subjects of the British Crown, who would meanly evade the performance of an onerous duty. If the plunger has not wholly passed away, it has, at least, been delayed; and every hour of delay gives strength, energy and efficiency to our military organization. We cannot too highly compliment the Minister of Militia for the zeal, mettitude and prudence with which he has acted in the matter, and gone to the frontier to protect the general interest, they should give some of the means towards the relief of those they had left behind, who might stand in need of such, and accordingly promptly voted the liberal amount above referred to. This is very creditable to the people of Russell, and worthy of emulation by the surrounding townships, who will, no doubt, quickly follow suit.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS FOR MARCH, TAKEN IN BRUNSWICK, C. E.—The Meteorological Phenomena of the Month of March have been curious and complicated; the weather has been unusually severe, not from the lowness of the temperature but from the searching influence of the North-west winds. Lowest range of the Thermometer 26°, highest, 52°, mean 40°. A cold front accompanied with a steady N.W. wind set in on the 4th instant passed round the circle on the 8th, and the Aurora lit up the North, sending its illumination through the high atmosphere with great force, it being visible seven nights in succession. On the 18th, 25th and 27th a spherule was very distinct, preceding and accompanying the great snow storm of the 20th/24th. This was as violent a storm as any during the winter, and was without doubt a cyclone or revolving storm, as the usual observer might notice, that with 24 hours interval of fine weather, the storm revived its fury from a directly opposite quarter. These cyclones or revolving storms, says Lieut. Macnay, "have a determinate task to perform in the economy of nature—a task which they cannot otherwise fulfill, save by rotation." The Aurora borealis has been visible 13 nights during the month; nocturnal light, three times; Crows made their appearance on the 2nd, and the song-sparrow was heard on the 24th. The unprecedent quantity of snow which has fallen during March and the latter part of February, will doubtless materially diminish the usual spring rains; and should the thaw be sudden, one, the weather, from the greatest depth of the frost in the ground, will probably add to the runoff into rivers and creeks, without much addition to the springs and wells. Should this be the case a dry and unfruitful season may be looked for.
