The Dry Goods Market.

We have to report, since our last, says the Trade Review, a very large business done, our wholesale merchants, with few, if any exceptions, having as much as they can manage to serve their customers, and ship the goods sold. In fact, in some houses, there are piles of goods sold, remaining unentered per day to the government allowance to from want of time, even by working until after midnight. We venture to say that a larger quantity of goods has been sold in this city during the past ten days than during the same time in any previous spring. A continuance of this activity for a week or two longer would greatly reduce the stock of dry goods held here. This may now be reported, as federate soldiers, which they exhume and turn | complete in every department, and both large and attractive.
