there reigned in the land of the setting sun a mighty monarch called Amer-Khan, whose dominions extended from the shores of the Atlantic to those of the Pacific. He had a grand vizier named Yang-ke-sc-Ward, whose authority was dreaded in every part of the inhabitable world; for Amer-Khan and Yangke were not only very powerful, being supported by an enormous army, composed of men of all nations, but they were reputed to Le great magicians, and full of occult wisdom. They exercised influence over all creation; they knew how to convert the woods of the great forest into the spices of the east; and their nutniegs, formed by their cunning out of the blackwood pine, deceived the merchants of the old world. They had religious rights and sacrifices of a peculiar kind, and whenever was or any other catastrophe overtook them, they invoked the for the supply of the City of Ottawa with Yang-ke, he had a black wife, who gave him a great deal of trouble, and on one occasion she left his home and declared that she would abide with him nodonger, for he would, under plea of granting her protection, keep her lock-WHEREAS JOHN CANTILLON HAS ed up in a dreary place, and allow none of her has left my employment without any just neighbors access to her, whilst himself derived all the profit of her labour.
