There'll be a new Yourope. Dear me, cousin, there's no gettin' at the rale thruth of anything in this worl!! 'Twas thought awhile ago we had all the outs an' ins of Mr. Stephens' escape from Dublin; but | Civil Service Rifles Attention. now it's said we were all wrong. We're tould. Notice to Contractors-Augustus Laver. that when he left Richmond prison in that onmannerly way without biddin' good night to the jailer, he went sthraight over to France, an' has been livin' quately in Paris iver since, while lettin' on to be in Dublin. It is said, too, that he has'nt gone to France at all, but is still snug in Dublin, laughin' at the way he has deluded iverybody.

Tom, It's time now to tell the thruth; an here it's for you-there's no sich man a Head Centhre James Stephens. Now that have tould you the fact, jist see how it stan's to rayson. Long before the Irish People was put down, an' the Fenians begun to be pick'd up, the Governmint knew what was goin' on ; they had their agent among the Fenians. That gentleman knew Stephens, he says, an' could have tould the Government about him an' pointed him out, an' brought the police to where he was. Nothin' of the sort was done; the small fry were pick'd up, an' the cunthry was all throughother, an' the Gover mint was workin' night an' day; an' Steph ens was all the time livin' in Dublin, like any other man, an he wasn't taken up! He was before their eyes an' they didn't see him ; couldn't catch them! Do you believe that? Is-it possible? No, sir; if there had been sich a man as Stephens he'd have been one of the first taken, with one of his own men in the Governmint pay ; for nobody can believe that Amprior, Sand Point, Pemmint didn't want to take him. But then we're tould that Stephens was taken, an' was put nto jail. Aye, put into jail, an' went out papers must think us, when they expect us to believe sich a story as that-through the kayhole! The tale about the imprisoning an' escape of Stephens is plain proof that sich a man never was in Richmond jail, an' never after the man left the -jail, like a ghost or a breth of win', he lived in Dublin quite at his hens for £3,000! Why? for the rayson that Office bours-8 a.m. to 7 p.m. there was no Stephens to betray. It there had been, an' he livin' in Dublin, he'd been sould. Then think of the way we're tould he left Dublin. Curnel Kelly says upon his honour he walked out of the house, an' the vessel at Dublin Quay, without any di guise whatever. Isn't that mighty likely Why, man, the whole story about Stephens is a sthring of mirricles; an' I don't think people have much faith in political mirricles. Whoiver'd b'lieve the moon's made of green cheese or brown soap. Jist concider the thing over :- There's a plot for puttin' down the Government, an' one of the plotters is in the Governint pay, an' tells them all he knows. They begin to take up the plotters, an' put them in fail; but their agent doesn'ttell them of the head one, or they won't take him up, or they can't find him, an' he in the middle of the detectives. At last they take him an' put him in jail, an' he walks out of in his common dhrese, with his remarkable ia :- John Mitchel is the Head Centhre of the Fenians. Well, he may have been over
