OTTAWA, OCTOBER 15, 1866. For Arrival and Departure of Mails see 1st Page.

The despatch published by the Philadel phia Ledger with reference to President Johnson's application to the U. S. Attorney General, to test the legality of the existing Congress turns out to have been a canard brokers. The President and the Attorney General have both emphatically denied truth of the despatch, and the Ledger while it lives to see these influences weakened and persisting that it had received it from a well informed source, humbly apologises for having given it publicity. The sensation did its work, however, before it was explained away. Gold which opened at 151 in the morning, rose with the publication of the revolutionary despatch to 1531, and the Tribune says that fore it was controllicted. It also alleges that one of the stock-holders in the Ledger had recently purchased a large amount of gold at a much less price, which circumstance may perhaps account for the Ledger having been made the medium of getting up the sensation. It is now affirmed that the President does not call in question the constitutionality of Congress.

The Feman trials at Toronto naturally attract a considerable share of attention, and it is reported that a special gallery for the representatives of the press will be constructed, as a large influx of American reporters is anticipated. We rejoice at this, and hope these gentlemen will send full reports of the proceedings-evidence of witnesses, speeches of counsel, &c., &c., to their respective papers, the mode in which British justice is adfuture which is now before them. In this prosequi, because the public temper will not tolerate conviction on the one hand, nor the hasty summoning of a court martial, cause the spirit of popular vengeance could not brook the delay of the ordinary tribunals, And these men are to be tried in Toronto, in the all others where the passions of the people might well be excited; in the very midst of the relatives and friends of nearly all the victims of that villainous raid : in the very city, if anywhere in Canada, of its way : the prisoners are captured and in due time conveyed to their place of confinecourt is opened at the usual time, and but for the fact that their numbers swell the docket to an unusual length, and that they are charged with a crime of rare occurrence there is nothing to distinguish these Fenian prisoners, from the ordinary run of thieves, pick-pockets and other criminals whom society in its own defence is compelled periodically from its ranks by due process of law.

And the judge's charge, so mild and tem perate and palliatory, of the conduct of these graceless ragamuffins! No mouthings of vaunting lip-lovalty, or vehement denunciation. On the contrary, a single and lucid impassioned judicial statement of fact, and a logical tracing of the circumstances, and even the force of outside (American) opinion which | great rapidity. grand jury for their consideration, the last enumerated having been interwoven with just the gentlest touch of sympathy with what the shock. may be called the poetry of the Irish nature and this, as the judge explained it, that the minds of the jurymen might be "toned down" to a state of judicial fitness for the impartial administration of British law. This we hold is a picture for our American cousins to study for their own profit.

Of course our people are not without their angry feelings of course many of them their unthinking moments will tell you "the fellows should have been shot down like dogs." Perhaps even our judges when not on th gench, like our jurymen when not in the box, may have had their times of excitement, when a hearty aspiration for the swift verdict of a drum-head court martial might have escaped their lips: for this Fenian business did stir up the feelings of our people to the very bottom-of this fact we wish our American neighbors to be fully persuaded-but when the time came round for the disposal of these prisoners, few indeed there were, and they without weight or responsibility, who called for any other course of action towards then than that which has been pursued A just because of the excitement in the country from which his honor could hardly expect h panel of jurors to be entirely free, did adopt the very course calculated to bri their minds down from the giddy heights excitement and prejudice, and up to the high standard of calm impartiality indispensible to the fair and faithful discharge of their responsible duties.

The news from Newfoundland continues to be of a most unhopeful character. The fail ure of the potato crop and the poor returns of the fisheries for the past season make the prospect a gloomy one for the coming winter.

It will be remembered that a petition was got up here some time since by the anti-Confederates, and while, no doubt, a goodly array of signatures was obtained, as a ertain kind can be obtained to do anything. no attempt was made outside St. John's, Trinity, Ferryland and Harbor Grace, and in the $10,000 latter place the defeat of the experiment was nally exhibited.
