cently murdered by the Mormons, I wish to make a few comments. It is stated the trouble arose out of an action by him against the city for the possession of the warm (sulphur) springs. This action may have hastened his death, but other motives much stronger made him objectionable to the people with whom he had to associate. He was a leading Gentile of Salt Lake City, and his education and intelligence soon proved him a powerfal antagonist of Mormonism. Over two years ago he was ordered to that city by the United States authorities as surgeon of the troops stationed there. Shortly after his arrival, General Connor (Commanding the District of Utah) ordered Captain Kittridge, with his

A few Gentiles had formed a Literary Society, exclusively Gentile, which the Doctor immediately identified himselt with, and with his characteristic go-a-headativeness it flourished under his careful guidance. When the "honest miners" from Montana, Idaho, or Nevada, had a few weeks to spend in the city, they would join it and the funds soon enabled the society to rent a hall. The next step taken was to induce the Rev. Norman McLeod of Denver, to come out and preach in it. He is a Canadian. Was educated for the Ministryin Montreal. Had been through the South at months passed he had over one hundred Mormon scholars, and a disturbance then appeared inevitable. He ordered a number of suits of clothes at different places in the city, also boots, hats, and other articles of clothing. He also ordered two beils for his church in Idaho of the Messrs. Meneely, bell-founders in West Troy, and took advantage of this trade to borrow $20 of the firm. Monday evening his last transaction took place, and it is supposed that he fied from the city that evening, although the developments mentioned were not made known until to-day. It is now known that he secured a new overcoat at one clothing house valued at $40, and borrowed sums of money of no less than eight or hine clergymen, leading church members, business men, etc. He made the acquaintance of ex-Member of Assembly Ingraham, of Cambridge, Washington county, upon the representation that he was a page in the Assembly when he (Ingraham) was a mem-
