The News follows up the above-quoted announcement by publishing a summary of the Quebec resolutions, but at present it is unnecessary to reproduce it here, as the Canadian public are, or ought to be, familiar with these resolutions, and it will be time enough when the bill'is published to enter on a close examination as to its agreement with the principles and details adopted at Quebec in 1864.

We notice that the Daily News (Montreal) has fallen into a mistake regarding the nature of the resolutions published by the Canadian News. Our Montreal confrere calls them the resolutions arrived at by the Confedera-"tion Congress," and adds that he sees "no "important departure from the original "scheme." If our contemporary will look ly a summary of the "original scheme," and not a copy of the resolutions adopted by the London Conference that the Canadian News in the fight at Ridgeway, and acknowledged Witherall's, at Kemptville, and at Prescott at H. professes to publish. It then hopes that the act of Confederation will be promptly carried into effect, notwithstanding the opposition "and the bad management of the Canadian representatives." It next refreshes the memory of its readers about the Albion's having doubted the wisdom of attempting to carry 'any particular scheme" without submitting " the project with all its details to the " ple of all the Provinces interested," with great many other speculations, equally variance with the actual progress of events during the past six weeks.

With the information which has for some time been before the Canadian public, we can afford to treat the Albion's confidential adviser with indifference, as events have already demonstrated that he was utterly misshould in the ordinary course of post have been in possession of information exactly to the contrary of that upon which its fears are Abbott, Heney, Featherston and Martineau. based.
