Says the Globe "If Sir John undertook to appoint magis-" trates now, he would not only be usurping " power which is not constitutionally his, but " he would be violating the understanding ar-" rived at during the last session of the old " Canadian Parliament." Just think of fact that Sir John has not undertaken to do anything of the kind. Our confrere must find a new grievance.

THE New York Albion in discussing the question of "Provincial rights in the new Dominion," falls somewhat into error in supposing that our old grievance of "sectional majorities" is precisely akin to the chronic struggle between "State rights" and Federal authority which chiefly contributed to the late, and as the Albion remarks, will probably be the main spring of the next, States' war. The question raised by the r sult of the elections in Nova Scotia, and which we beg the Albion to understand we discussed solely of our own motion, without reference to the views of the distinguished statesman referred to by our contemporary on the subject, had reference to the local majorities in the General Legislature. been a question in the United the Administration for representatives from But it was a question under the old Canadian Constitution-and one that was a source of infinite trouble-whether the sectional majorities from the east and west were the day. Unfortunately the result of the elections in Nova Scotia has forced a kindred the new Dominion, and we believed it within our sphere as a journalist, to point out at length and "in rather a serious tone" (according to the Albion) that the Government of Canada should be "constituted with a due " regard to the public sentiment of the coun-"try, irrespective of the accidental preval-" ence of one particular shade of politics in any "one Province." The Albion, after quoting from our remarks upon this subject, says:

"It is clear that there cannot be two sovereignties. The phrase "Sovereign State." is common hereabouts, but how the State can be "Sovereign," while the General Government holds the purse-strings and commands the army and navy of the United States, and gotiates treaties without the consent or operation of individual States, we cannot clearly see. W. C. Little, Esq., the elect of South Simcoe, was next proposed. Mr. Little eloquently responded, forcibly showing that the future strength of the Provinces consisted in their union, ably showing that England herself would not hold her present high position in the world only for the union of Scotland and Ireland, and that proud-Prussia now ranks one of the first powers of Europe by the union of small German States. The guests, with whom was associated Wm. McLean, Esq.

Mr. McLean neatly responded. After a few other toasts were proposed, God Save the Queen was ably led by Mr. Whitebred, the meeting broke up at a late hour, much Collingwood Enterprise.

PASTORAL OF THE PAN-ANGLICAN SYNOD.

[From the London Times, Oct. 1.]

A Pastoral 1s, we suppose, only a more emn kind of sermon, and it is therefore as sermon that we may regard the Lambeth ddress which we published yesterday. As such it will be sure to receive the attention which is due to it. A sermon from an ordinary Bishop will generally attract a large congregation, and a sermon from 75 Bishops at once will doubtless be respectfully perused by all "the members of the Church of Christ in communion with the Anglican branch of the " Church Catholic" to whom it is addressed. State, and we suppose it is to this circumstance that we are to ascribe the somewhat formal and antique phraseology in which it is couched. We cannot but think, indeed, that such a style is as much out of place in the of State dress, and we are persuaded that ecclesiastics would lose nothing by adopting the ordinary language of modern life. It is possible to be quite as solemn in natural Engadded to the force or the propriety of language growing life, energy, and aspirations installed third person singular of verbs. Moreover, as with the parallel we refer to, it is impossible to cast the whole ceremony, or the whole address, into an antique mould, and the result | reports the Russian advance in Central Asia is an indescribable incongruity. choir of nearly a hundred members was collected, including singers from the Chapel Royal, St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's, and the Temple Church, from the last named three of which establishments all the juvenile choristers attended. Before commencing the service, all the prelates and officiating clergy formed a procession, which, headed by the vergers and wand-bearers, passed down the central aisle out of the principal portal, and made a circuit of the ground enclosing the venerable Thursday Evg., 24th list. Church of St. Mary, into which the procession then returned, as the choir sang with magniticent effect the processional hymn, "All people that on earth do well." The Litany and Psalms were intoned: the Lessons, the Epistle, and the Gospel were read, by American Bishops. The anthem was Mendelssohn's, "How lovely are the messengers that preach the gospel of peace. To all nations is gone forth the sounds, of these words, throughout the land all their glad tidings."
