Mr. A. McKENZIE spoke at length. He said that when the hon, member for Welling manuel. Fenianism, repressed in Ireland, has ton was a supporter of gentlemen opposite, taken the form of organized violence and as he had been during last session, he was murder in England, where it must also be supnot succeed at, as he had just been by the pressed by the firm fulfillment of the law and Minister of Justice. He went over the points by the loyalty of the people. The Speech alluded to by Dr. Parker, contending that the concludes with the promise that Her Majesty's Dominion had unduly interfered with the Reform Bills for Scotland and Ireland, and formation of the Local Government. The other domestic measures of an important fact was well known, though it perhaps could | character. not be proved by the record. I

Mr. BLAKE said it was not that the interfered in the elections of Ontario, but because he had interfered, and his colleagues had interfered—they had made it a part of seconded by Lord Hylton. Both Addresses their policy to interfere as a Government in echo the speech of the Queen. these elections. They had combined with the member for Cornwall to carry the elections in their joint right.

purpose of giving the hon. member for West | Conference, but had refused to do so, unless a Durham and his friends another opportunity distinct plan of action was first proposed. of airing their grievances. He (Mr. McD.) Lord Stanley thought that participating in were here in much smaller numbers than such Congress would only add to the responsithey had anticipated. With respect to their efforts to carry the elections, which had proved so successful, he quite agreed with sending a military expedition to Italy. the remarks of the leader of the Government that it was due to themselves that they should appear before the electors to vindicate that policy, and vindicate the course which they had taken. His hon, friend from Lambton had visite! North Lanark, phy, plumb r, of this city, aged 19 years and six but had been unable to make much impression in a Radical constituency. After holding two or three meetings he left, and when election day came round he (Mr. McD.) was and acquaintances are respectfully requested elected by acclamation. Mr. Macdougall attend without further notice. then referred to the Toronto Convention, and to the meeting of Reform members of Parliament, called by his Reform colleagues and himself, at which the member for Centre Wellington was present, and had endorsed their

Dr. PARKER-I said nothing. Hon. Mr. MACDOUGALL-Tuen if the hon. thember said nothing, it was pretty clear his conviction had not been very strong. But to come to the result of the election contest. Had those gentlemen, who raised the old party flag, carried sixty Reform constituen cies as they had promised? Had the hon. gentleman a following of sixteen? He should like to have them counted. As the hon. Nov. 21, 1867 member for Durham had thrown a taunt across the House that he (Mr. McD.) had no personal following. He did not claim to have any, he did not want it, but he was a member of a government sustained by the representatives of the people, and he should like to know how many followers had the member for Lambton. Had he one besides the gentleman behind him (Mr. Blake) who would follow him in bringing upon every conceivable occasion all the by gone grievances which it was now so desirable should be laid aside that they might devote themselves to their ORPHANS OF ST. JOSEPH new duties under the new Constitution?

Mr. PARKER said the hon, leader of the Government had misrepresented his whole argument. The Commissioner of Public Works had sneeringly asked where were the sixty Reformers against the Government. The hon, gentleman had himself assisted to defeat them. That hon, gentleman and the Minister of Excise hind not a corporal's guard-not even a corporal--behind them. He admitted that the hon, and gallant Knight at the head of the Government had secured a large majority in Ontario., He (Mr. P.) had not objected to the Province of Ontario, but had said that the apparent understanding between that hon, gentleman and the Premier of the Dominion was traught with danger. He had not complained of the appointment of a military governor, but it was very convenient to select one who knew nothing of the local politics of Ontario, and was not familiar with the Civil Government. He went on to discuss what he called the intrigues in the formation of the Local Government, and said it would lead to subservence. Hon. Mr. HUNTINGDON argued that the great Conservative party from Ontario was led by the hon and galiant Knight. The Reform Ministers were merely followers. He was here to assist in carrying out Confederation, and in making this a great country. He referred to a fact that was publicly stated in Lower Canada, that it was the desire of the Dominion Government that Local Ministers should obtain seats in the Federal

Hon. Mr. CHAUVEAU denied that such Hon. Mr. HUNTINGDON hoped at all events that the alliance between the Local and General Governments would speedily cease. If a Legislature Union was desired, it would be better to say so boldly and

Hon. J. S. MACDONALD said that what had taken place in the House to-night, showed the necessity of public men being careful of what and to whom they spoke, as it was only too often misinterpreted, as had been done in regard to himself by the member for Lambton. He denied that there was any understanding between himself and Sir John. He was not responsible for the result of Confederation which he had voted against; but he had stated iast session that he would accept the position and give it an honest support. He would ask if he understood the hon, gentleman to say that the Local Government should disagree with the General from the outset. That was the idea of the party of which the member for Lambton was the spokesman, that there should be no peace unless he and his friends were in power. If that was the case they would be very glad to hear the Local Government in accord with them. He said that this was not the place to defend his position as Premier of Ontario. In his proper place he would defend his position. Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD substantiated the statement of his hon. friend, pow before the Parliament of the Dominion.
