of the people in the Domitton Government the abundance of money seeking investment at reasonable rates in the country, and the soundness of the Government policy in appealing to the confidence of the people with in the Dominion to meet the pressing demands on the public exchequer, instead negociating a tresh loan in the English money market. It must be a matter for sincere satisfaction to the Government and the pub plete success. The evidence it affords of the | Secretary's Office, Quebec confidence of the people in the stability their institutions will give a firmer tone Canadian securities in the money markets the world, and prove that this country acquiring by degrees all the elements of elependent, or we should rather say, self sus. raining, national existence. At a time, too, tivity; when capital finds abundant opportunities of employment at remunerative rates of interest, it will be found that the wheels of industry have not been in the least retarded in their motion by the absorption of th amount of capital in a' Government loan Doubtless future issues will meet with less encouragement on the part of the public as it may be fairly assumed that the money thus invested has all been withdrawn from brilliant and interesting to Mr. Chauveau, less remunerative, or at all events less secure employment. This fact evidences the gradual accumulation of wealth in the country, and may be taken as a substantial illustration of particular has been framed with an intelligent appreciation of the circumstances of the country is abundantly proved by the success of the loan. The annual saving to the try by the Government's borrowing at home. instead of abroad is represented by the amount pavable yearly for interest. In this case, though the saving is not a very large sum-$90,000-it is still a respectable beginning. and large enough, perhaps, to be appreciable in many ways. We hope that filture issues of Dominion Stock will be as readily taken up by the country; and when, in addition the Government Savings Bank in connection with the Post Office, is put in operation, we that the Canadian people have, within themselves, the means and the will to give the country a large margin of credit.

It needs very little argument to show the difference between a rublic debt borrowed at home, and one borrowed in a foreign its industry. The loan raised at home therefore far more advantageous than that raised abroad; and while the Government maintains the interest at a rate which not unduly lead to the withdrawal of capital from employment in ordinary commercial pursuits, it is but serving the best interests of the people, especially of the industria classes, in providing a safe means of invest ment for their surplus earnings.

THE LATE MR. CASGRAIS.

This gratifying result shows the confidence We regret to hear of the demise at Quebec Sunday, the 10th inst, of Mr. Olivier A. Casgrain who was highly esteemed and respected by all with whom he came in contact, and who was a spirited contributor to Canadian literature His illness was of very short duration. We cannot do better justice to his qualities than quote the following tribute that appeared in the Journal de Quebec :

" Death has just taken from amongst us, and rather suddenly too, a young man not only enthis first attempt to give effect dowed with remarkable talents, but one also, to the new financial policy of the Do who was well known to the Canadian public he cannot get credit if he should want it, would essays-Mr. O. Casgrain was gifted with more literary talent than any other pupil he had known in Canada. 'I have no ibt,' said he, 'but that were he to devote himself to literature, he would produce such works as would be an honor to himself and

During the time of his attendance at Laval University more recently, without neglecting his ordinary studies, he closely followed up the knowledge acquired through the Abbe Ferland in the history of Canada. The notes he took down were subsequently published in the Courrier du Canada, and appeared so that he re-produced them in the Journal de l'Instruction Publique.

A cruel malady, after such close and ardent study, has now prematurely terminated his career. For many years past he has appeared That the policy of the Government in this in the field of poetry, and has contributed to the columns of various newspapers. readers of the Revue Canadienne will doubtless remember the comical verses of La Tauride, in which the habits and manners of the Canadians were well and truthfully pourtrayed. After this he wrote La Grande Fronciade, a light, frolicsome effusion, which, strange to say in Canada, brought not only flattering, but at the same time a certain amount satirical criticism upon him. This, however, of itself showed evidence of real merit.

From his first appearance as a writer, Mr. Chauveau, who well deserves the name of the Canadian Mécene, had taken an interest in the young man, and was ceaseless in encouraging him to further and greater exertions. It-was copied rom the Momestead Laws of the United States, and provided that $750.00 should be secured to a man out of the proceeds of his property if sold for debt, and a man's farm might be sold at any time it worth more than $750 Suppose a man became dissipated, and got i debt, when his property came to be sold he spend it all in a few days, and leave his wife and children beggars. The true idea of Homestead Law would seem to be a certain quantity of land with dwelling house and family against all accidents or misfortunes but it is a very difficult question, one requiring a great deal of careful thought to place it in a proper light. No doubt it sounds well to talk of securing a homestead to every man, but a law could not be passed that would wipe out present liabilities, so that it would not benefit any person now in debt to pass such a law, and a man who by care and economy has made a home for himself, is not likely to need ! any protection. There is one side of the quesion that is always overlooked, that is the very idea 'of protecting a man's property from febt, admits that some person must be cheated out of his rights, because if he does not go in debt, his property cannot be taken from him now, and if he does obtain credit and get | united the property of another, and use it for his own use and benefit, why should he be protected in keeping it without having paid for it? But admitting that you need not give a man-credit when you know his property is secured, and say rather think-that if the collection of small debts by law, say up to fifty dollars, was done country than a Homestead Law. Many a poor man has been kept with his nose to the grindstone for years, paying costs of court to Division Court clerks, who generally take care to collect all the fees they can, and very iten promise to pay the debt on condition of receiving twenty-five to fifty per cent, incerest perhaps, the creditor is not paid. says: Lieut.-General Sherman, according to private despatches received in this city, does not appreciate the kind intention of Mr. Johnson in assigning him to the new Military Division, with his headquarters at Washington. The Lieut.-General has telegraphed to one or two of his friends in Washington and other places, that he does not wish to come here and that he does not believe the President can legally create a new military division. He is so determined on this point, that he prefers the alternative of resigning, and will so act if ordered to accept the post. Lieut.-General to have the Military Committee refuse to sanction the appointment, and the Senator will present a Bill denying the authority of the President to make the proposed change. The order directing Maj.-Gen. Thomas to his post in the War Department as Adjutant-General, which was issued last evening, is meant by the President as a severe blow at Secretary Stanton. It is said the difficulty will be overcome by altering the law directing that an officer over forty-six years of age may be retired, so as to read, shall be retired, and The Attorney-General will, it is said, soor give an opinion that the orders on recon struction, required to be issued through the General of the Armies are only military ones, and not those of a civil nature. This is called for by the Grant-Hancock difficulty. NEW YORK, Feb. 15 .- A special to the Express says : The President has a letter from Gen. Sherman, showing that Gen.
