OTTAWA Business College. THE undersigned have this day disposed of the furniture, goods, &c., of the British American Commercial College, of this city, to Mr. JOHN M. MUSGRAVE. Parties holding shares, granted previous to date, will complete their studies with the above named party. H. MUSGRAVE, H. C. WRIGHT. Ottawa, March 29, 1868.

WRITING CLASSES. Will commence on the 1st of April next, under the superintendence of the Champion Penman of Canada, when all those wishing to become proficient in the art of penmanship would do well to call. The advantages arising from being able to write a good hand, and at the same time to write rapidly and plainly, will be conceded by all, although possessed by few. This is an accomplishment essential to every position of life, but above all in the counting room. It demands the closest attention of every one who purposes following a mercantile or business life, and to this art may be traced the means of bringing many of our merchant princes to wealth and honor. The art employment is sure. All information furnished on application to MUSGRAVE & WRIGHT, Ottawa Business College, Ottawa.

BOOKKEEPING. A good first-class bookkeeper is always sure of a situation, when he can command a large salary, and while we are willing at all times to assist all our students in getting situations, we shall be careful to recommend those only in whom we have confidence as to capability, honesty and diligence. Bookkeeping in all its branches, such as Mining, Milling, Manufacturing, Commission, Foreign Exchange, Jobbing, Changing Single to Double Entry, Commercial Arithmetic, Penmanship, Commercial Law, Spelling, Reading, Dictation, and Bookkeeping is taught in such a manner that the student becomes an ACTUAL MERCHANT, carrying on business under his own name, making his payments, discounting the notes of others, and having his own disbursements, and keeping his own books in every particular during the whole course of a miniature business life. Particular attention is called to the business transactions in which the student is required to engage in doing business between this country and the countries of Europe, and also with the neighboring Republics. Each student is required to carry on business as if he were a wholesale merchant in New York, when his currency will be that of the United States, after which he will prefer to open an establishment in London, England, when he will carry on business in sterling money. Students will thus become acquainted with the established currency of each country, by having to go through the real transaction himself, and not depending altogether on his theory for a knowledge of those indispensable requirements absolutely necessary to the business man. Ladies can receive private lessons in Penmanship if desired. Ottawa, March 27, 1868. 702a
