THE Leader of-Wednesday enters upon an elaborate defence of the Hon. J. H. and M. C. CAMERON, for having accepted a retainer in the case of WHELAN. - There is nothing to be objected to in the argument of our contemporary. These gentlemen have not only the right, but as we understand their obligation, were in duty bound to accept the trust. The prisoner, like any other prisoner, has the right to secure the best counsel he can; and if Mr. O'FARRELL, in his interest, was able to enlist the leading spirits of the Ontario bar on his behalf, then so much the better for him. The point has now been | 20 shillings. placed beyond dispute, that Mr. O'FARRELL did so succeed, for the two CAMERONS, with Mr. KENNETH McKENZIE, were in Court yesferday, when the prisoner was arraigned, and are evidently prepared to assist in his defence. There is nothing to be complained of in this. Of course, it is somewhat unusual to have three leading members of the bar pitted against a solitary Crown Prosecutor. We believe it is customary for the Crown to prepare itself in something like a fair proportion to the array of talent that may be pitted against it; but in this case, find Mr. O'REILLY left single-handed o prosecute against three of the most emiknowledged to be one of the most expert law-/ yers, especially in criminal matters, of whom the sister Province can boast. It would seem, therefore, that there are long odds against said before, that when cases come into Court they are not to be judged by the array of legal talent, either on one side or the other but by the naked facts and the fair interpretation of the law bearing on them. As to this particular trial, we have the utmost confidence that on the part of the Crown the case will be fairly presented and ably argued while on the part of the prisoner no one can doubt that all will be done for him that is

The Leader's article is remarkable in that it shows the pitch to which public feeling has been worked up regarding this trial. The very fact that our able and argumentative scenes had been for a long time unfamiliar, confrere has been compelled to enter the lists and argue, for what under ordinary circumof feeling abroad. But though the popular mind will not regard it, the judicial mind of the country must. The Judge on the Bench, the Jurymen in the box, (there is no box in the Ottawa Court House), the Counsel at the bar, must all be guided by the hard facts brought out in evidence; and even the public mind, which to its own satisfaction nurtures an entirely exceptional idea concerning that mur-

Of course the "Loyalists," pily there was no fight. The "peelers" had it all their own way, and so the affair ended.

On Weinerday last the second 'annual meeting of the Dominion Medical Association assembled at Montreal. The Hon. Dr. Tup-PER, C. B., the President, delivered an able and interesting address. Several reports were submitted from committees, and in the evening a conversazione was held, which was largely patronized.

he Hon, J. H. Cameron, Hon, M. C. Cameron, accompanied by John O'Farrell, Esq., and Kenneth McKenzie, Esq., entered the court having driven up together about noon, and some little excitement was occasioned among the initiated by the understanding that Whelan would be arraigned for Mr. McGee's murder upon the first subsequent opportunity. The general expectation was satisfied by the entry about one o'clock, (when the room was nent members of the Ontario bar, and these almost empty) of the Sheriff, followed by the three backed by Mr. O'FARBELL, who is ac. prisoner, who was led in "nippers" by two policemen, and closely guarded by a strong party of the force. Upon his being placed in the dock-when his hands were freed-the attention of the small body of spectators was at once attracted towards him. He was neatly dressed in a complete suit of black, and the Crown. But we have to say, as we have evidently carefully costumed for the trying moment of his public reappearance, having had his beard and moustache accurately trimmed, and his wavy hair arranged with the glossiest precision. His appearance is less careworn than at the time of his committal, and his health seems to have improved under prison discipline. He took his seat with great self-possession, bowed gravely and courteously to the governor of the gaol and to his counsel and, unless it be for a slightly nervous twitching of his moustache, exhibited as much unconcern as anybody present. Scarcely seeming to pay attention to the very uninteresting cordwood squabble pending, to which, indeed even the combined genius of Messrs. Ross and Mozgrove were unable to lend the balo of sensation, he glanced over the strange array of faces round him, with just the natural interest of a recluse, to whom such imposing saluting each of his acquaintances as they caught his eye in turn. Altogether, he seems much improved (physically), during his retirement, and bore himself manfully throughout, displaying neither timidity or effrontery. Standing up while the indictment was being read over by the Clerk, he did shows that not wait until the conclusion to put in his fully killing Mr. McGee, inferrupted firmly and determinedly with the words "I deny the he emphatically repeated the same phrase, and a plea of not guilty was consequently recorded. THE START.

Early in the evening there were evident okens of something on the tapis, from the general bustle displayed by the members of the O. U. R. Club, and their friends who had been so cordially invited for the occasion. As the shades of night drew around we began to ealize the fact that our previous expectations were about being fulfilled as carriage after arriage, and couple after couple, wended their way to the Queen's wharf. About 8 o'clock some two hundred excursionists were on board the beautiful steamer Alexandra, under the command of Captain Bowie, who on this occasion, as on all previous occasions, made every endeavour to accommodate and add to the comfort of those bent on an evening's recreation. The genial warm-heartedness of our friend Captain Bowie on occasions of thi kind is always the subject of universal remark among such as have the pleasure of his acquaintance. Shortly after eight o'clock the Alexandra left her moorings, Gowan's band playing some fine and appropriate selections for the occasion. The departure of the steamer was viewed by a vast concourse of spectators from the wharf and the surrounding cliffs; but in a short time the stately steamer was out of their reach and plying, on her down ward trip, the noble Ottawa. This twilight scene was but of short duration, and had to give place to what might be termed a still more beautiful scene; more vividly described by the poet when he says: -"But at length the feverish day, Like a passion died away.

And the night, severe and still, Fell on village, vale and hill ; Then the moon, in all her pride, Like a spirit glorified, Filled and overflowed the night With revelations of her light. ON BOARD THE STEAMER. Now that the steamer was fairly under wa

> SINGULAR AFFAIR -- A CORPSE FRIGHTENS THE PALL-BEAR. ERS BY CALLING FOR A JULEP.

[From the Norfolk, Va., Journal, August 17.1 Rather a ludicrous event occurred on Saturday last. It having been reported that a certain gentleman had died, and was to have been buried on Saturday evening; quite a number of his old friends and acquaintances repaired to his bouse to pay the last sad tribute of res. pect by following his remains to the grave. As the death had been sudden, the coroner had been summoned, and when his duties had been performed the remains were placed on an extemporized hearse, and the procession Before moving, the hospitalities of the deceased's house were extended to those present in the shape of a good, stiff brandy julep each, so as the better to enable them to undergo the fatigue of the long march to the new burying-ground. While the pall-bearers, who were standing by the hearse, were slowly sipping their juleps, and now and again giving the goblets a slight was heard in the coffin, which turned some faces whiter than they had been for years before. Finally, the undertaker for the occasion mustered countre enough to unscrew the coffin lid, when horrible to behold, up sat the supposed corpse, and coolly asked for his julep. Having quenched his thirst he got down and stated to THIS MORNING'S DESPATCHES. the gaping crowd that he had been in a sort of trance, and knew all that was going on around him, but was unable to rouse himself until his cars were greeted with that familiar jingle of the ice, and his nose with the delicious' smell of the brandy and mint in the goblets muda, a vessel next to the Great Eastern in round the hearse, the thoughts called forth by which infused new life into his system, and the desire to partake was so strong that he was able to break the trance which had come near to consigning him to a premature
