FROM TORONTO.

Another Letter from Hon. J. Howe--He Exposes Proceedings at the Repeal Convention, and Discloses the Further Connection with the Government, as Considered in Correspondence with the Ottawa Government, &c.

Special to THE TIMES.

Toronto, November 9, 1868.

The second article of the day has a letter from the Hon. Joseph Howe, which was published in the Canadian Chronicle on Saturday. It covers two full columns, and states Mr. Howe's opposition in England with reference to the attempts made to move the Government, Legislature, "Rule Britannia," and the people, in favor of repeal. The result showed that it was impossible to influence any class for repeal. Having twice failed, Mr. Howe resolved never to try a third experiment. He was encouraged by Mr. Bright to believe a Union of the Maritime Provinces would be formed, in which case the question might assume a new aspect; but he could not conceive that the insurgents, against whom the forces of the Turkish Government have hitherto shown themselves powerless.

THIS MORNING'S DESPATCHES.

Rumored Appointments.

New York, November 9.—The Commercial's special says that Mr. Stanton will be made the War Office Secretary, and Indiana Senator, Mr. George the Postmaster-General, and Gen. Sickles is spoken of as Minister to England. Gen. Rosecrans will be recalled from Mexico promptly.

Suspension of the Wisconsin State Bank.

MILWAUKEE, November 9.—A run on the Milwaukee Bank commenced on Saturday. The Wisconsin State Bank was suspended.

The Bankers said it was heavy.

Steamship Collision of Sandy Hook.

NEW YORK, November 9.—The steamships General Meade and Marietta came into collision on Saturday night off Sandy Hook, and near the Scotland light ship. A telegram says the Marietta was mistaken in her port light, and caused one of her boilers to burst, but without injuring anyone severely on board. The Marietta sank to her deck, and the General Meade had a hole knocked in her bow, from which she leaked badly, and it was found necessary to run her on Jersey flats.

Mr. Howe was still willing to let the steamer go if she could see any end to the contest. He explained his feelings to his friends in Halifax convention before the legislature met. He was asked whether they should do, and replied that they could declare their independence, but he would not advise it. If this were done, they must sign a declaration pledging their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor for its maintenance.

None of his friends accepted this solution. He then said the last word, and told the Ministers to send their resignations and resume work under the Governor whilst he held commission from any party but the Queen direct, and promised if this were adopted he would back the Council, by himself, and all he could influence, resigning their seats in the House of Commons.

But not a man rose to second this suggestion.

From that moment Mr. Howe has had no part in the repeal movements, in which he had no faith. He is now in correspondence with the Government at Ottawa, and any one who likes can see him.

This letter has created great excitement in Halifax. The Unionists predict a collapse of the repeal agitation. The Anti-slavery men, &c., Howe in unmeasured terms. It is thought no more moderate men will go with him.

Blanchard's protest against McDonald's return is on the ground of undue influence, intimidation, bribery, and illegal conduct of the preceding officers.

There has been a very great increase in the amount of freight traffic on the Grand Trunk Railroad. A large number of men were easily engaged last night, unlading cars.

A large crowd ran off the cars, and over the Grand Trunk, near the Asylum, last night. No one injured.

A daring attempt at robbery was made on a tavern-keeper last night. Two men entered a tavern by a side door, and before the landlord knew of their presence, burst into the room. The landlord who accompanied her, was made three separate attempts to stab the young lady, and cut her hat in as many pieces, appearances would indicate, with a razor. Several days since an anonymous note was sent to the house of Mr. Deering for Miss Sanford, in which it was written, "I am the author of this note, and I am the person who sent it to you." The writer, whose identity was known, said she intended her only.

The writer selected a certain locality and time for the meeting. Mr. Deering accompanied the young lady, but as nothing could be seen of the mysterious person at the appointed place they returned home. Another note was sent, which stated that the writer wished to see Miss Sanford alone, and appointed Monday evening as the time and the corner of Eighth and Front-sts. as the place of meeting. On this occasion Mr. Deering remained at home, and another gentleman went as an escort. Mr. Deering and his wife, as they say, the locality referred to, as the woman walked down on the other side of the street. As she approached a secluded spot near Richardson's match factory, an unknown man jumped from near the fence, and struck the young lady a powerful blow on the head. She immediately fainted, and was assisted by the man who had accompanied her, as a guard rushed to her assistance. Before he could reach her, however, the would-be murderer had dealt her two other blows, and, observing that he was in danger of being captured, fled towards Lafayette Avenue. He was soon overtaken, and captured, and carried to the police station, where, when they wanted, replied firmly. After much pleading of payment, and being refused, they collared the landlord, threw him on the floor, and demanded his money. A hot struggle ensued, but the thief's becoming alarmed, they were discovered and arrested, together with the landlord.

At about half-past seven last evening, was nearing Griswold, a lamp in one of the cars fell to the floor, smashing the lamp to pieces. In an instant the interior of the car was in a blaze. The passengers managed to escape into the next car, but the car in which the accident occurred was completely gutted.

J. E. Smith has given his appointment, but is expected to enter on the performance of his duties at present.

The proceeds of the Concert this evening will be devoted to charitable purposes.
