CURIOSITIES OF ENGLISH ADVER-

The Pall Mall Gazette has an entertaining article growing out of the recent publication in London of an advertising periodical called the Exchange and Mart. This periodical says the Pall Mall Gazette, offers its columns at a low MARTERY, JORDAINE & CC., of Montreal, and rate to advertisers, wishing either to goods are all new and of very superior quality, exchange or to sell anything, from a rare being imported expressly for a fashionable Mon> a mansion house. We give, by way of illustration, a few of the advertisements in the Exchange and Mart, as they are given in the article above referred to Here are two advertisements which 1 0 answer each other in the most admirable manner, so far as one material of the bargain is concerned :-" Dandie Dinmont terrier puppy, mus-" Wanted, a Dandie Dinmont or Scotch

On looking further, we find that the first advertiser wants in exchange for the tyke " Votes for the Old Kent Asylum"

The second offers in exchange for the Dandie Dinmont " a handsome bull terrier from a prize strain." Another advertiser is apparently equipping himself as a Fenian for he dates from Donegal, and offers a red Irish setter for a Colt's revolver, and a "choice whelp ditto" for a bowie-knife. Many of the proposed exchangers are morocco handkerchief box, with gilt finishings exceedingly pretty. She is "only open to offers of rings not turquoise." Another lady has a white Limerick lace tunic, uncleaned, cost £4. She wishes for a good turquoise ring and long gold earrings. Another writes: "I wish for rings. I have an electric machine and apparatus, a pneumatic trough, an alarum, alphabetical safety lock, and other things, but am open to offers.' One lady declares that a scalskin jacket is much wanted, but she is "open to offers," and this is what she will give : " A Lallier album, containing six hundred and eighty-one stamps, very rare ones indeed, forty-six graduated red cornelian beads, thirteen large ivory ones, three pretty illuminations, a set of green beetles, earrings and brooch, on gilt leaf, cost nearly £2.

Under the head of books and pamphlets we find an advertisement which Dr.

McNeil or some of his friends should certainly look up. "I have about one hundred different, mostly free-thought, pamphlets, average price sixpence, which I would exchange for anything useful worth a guinea." Here is another specimen: "I have twenty military badges, and Adam and
