AN INTERESTING "LIVE CARGO." THE DEATH OF THE PRINCE ROYAL OF BELGIUM. MISCELLANEOUS.

MONTREAL, FEB. 15, 1869. The afternoon train of Friday, from Ottawa, took a large number of passengers. Amongst them were contractors from Ontario, from Quebec, from New Brunswick and from Nova Scotia, who had volunteered to sacrifice themselves for their bleeding country, but some of whom, from the prices they asked, would have made the country bleed pretty freely if their tenders had been accepted.

There were editors and reporters who had gone to witness the last scene in the McGeer tragedy, and there were friends and sympathizers of Whelan, who did not attempt to conceal their sorrow at his death. It was a mixed assembly, such as is seldom seen on a railway train, and amongst them were some original characters
