SOCIAL DEPRAVITY IN FRANCE. The Paris correspondent of the London by the debates on the demolitions of Paris, the famous contract between the city and the Credit Foncier, the 'irregularities' or illogalities of the Prefect of the Seine, the Parisian press has paid little attention to the details disclosed during the trial which has been just brought to a close at the assizes of Montauban. These details exhibit a social depravity hardly ever surpassed in the annals of crime. The leading criminal in this horrible stability of the Dominion Telegraph Com- affair was a woman named Delpech, whose principal occupation seemed to be murdering little children, t he offspring of illicit amours, confided to her at their birth or soon afterward. She had carried on her trade for some years, when the suspicions of the police were aroused. A search was made in her house, and it led to the discovery of the skeletons, and in some cases only a few bones of her victims, and she and some of her accomplices before and after the fact were taken into custody and brought to trial. She made a full avowal, and netsonly did she not profess any compunction for what she had done, but laughed several times during her examination by the presiding judge. She has got the name of the 'Ogress;' but the ogress of the nurser; tale was less merciless, for she tried to save the children of the wood-cutter. The woman Delpech, beyond all doubt a most hideous creature, has surpassed other criminals both in the quantity and quality of Lospos, April 3 .- The Royal mail steam- crime.
