Ir is just possible that since Trades' Unions cannot be suppressed the best way to deal with them is to give them a legal status. The great objection to them is that they are out of the temporary chaos which the union levellers rather than elevators of the working man; they bring the first class mechanic down to the dead level of ordinary mediocrity, and place the botch side by side with the very best workman. is dou'tful indeed if they have conferred any real benefit upon the labouring classes. They are as different from the co-operative societies as Free Trade from protection. They are essentially protectionist in their character and protectionist in the most objectionable way. They restrain talent and industry by forcing a fixed price by the day upon labour which is variable in value, according to the at no distant period, from the state of his advantage. After finishing the extracts the speaker asked, can we permit our children to be so educated? He paid a compliment to the union and perseverance of the Roman Catholics, and said it was a shame that we were less united and energetic than they. He then went into an explanation of the scheme, and stated that the capital was Festival to-night. fixed at $50,000, that it was a joint stock limited liabilty company. After describingthe college and the education to be given therein, he cotended that we could educate as well and as cheaply as the Nuns, and yet make it pay. He also instanced the college at Hamilton which he said would pay 91 per cent., and he had no doubt but in a short time which we might be proud. The rev. gentleman concluded a clear and able address, by That a College be established in this city. o be known as " Ottawa College," which shall have for its object the imparting of a thorough English and classical education " 200 acres of land for nething" to which you and at the same time afford the most ample facilities for instruction in all those depart regarded as forming a necessary part of a a wife would be an assistance, not a drawback, as a recognition of God, and a knowledge of if the wife was, what Scotch wives generally God's will, must be regarded as of prime importance in the formation of moral character. the Bible shall be an essential part of the currifirst few acres, so as to secure a crop, and culum of study; the religious instruction of the then, if they desired it, they could take up lots | College shall be based upon and confined to for themselves, being entitled, as young men the known and established principles over eighteen years of age, to a hundred acres | Christianity, held by all Christians, to the each.
