We are glad to understand that the Privy Council have appointed Mr. J. H. DALY, son of the late J. H. DALY, Esq., to the office of Emigration Agent at Montreal.

What has become of the movement for the holding of a Grand Agricultural Exhibition, under the auspices of the Ottawa Agricultural Society? Surely it is time that the prize lists be published and scattered broadcast throughout Central Canada.

The dinner to Sir Francis Hincks last evening was all that could have been expected. The dining-room of the Russell House was taxed to its utmost capacity.

As to the present charge against Mr. Kix, it appears anything but a crime in the light in which it is presented by the New York Times, which, in financial and commercial matters, is a far better authority than the World.

It is not rather true that the Directors of the Society have gone to sleep over their duties, and done nothing, or next to nothing, towards the getting up of the exhibition? If they are neglecting their trust, as we believe they are, the subscribers to the Society should call them to account.

Seven years ago an Irishman named Gallagher left Dover, N.J., having paid $15 for a lot of potatoes before he left. Nothing having been heard from him for some time, a calligrapher who had used it, etc.

States Minister to France, would succeed him, and, though subsequently denied, the rumour has proved correct. For Mr. Hincks, an old and experienced journalist, who will undoubtedly prove a worthy successor to Mr. Hincks, has already assumed the chief editorial control of the New York Times, and the New York World, the foremost journal of the opposite party, alludes to the fact in the following complimentary terms:

"Mr. Hincks will take the chair of the Times with the cordial good will of every journalist who appreciates his ability and his reputation as a professional man. Those of his own party may well be glad of the accession of one so accomplished and so able to their side; and we may be said to speak for the entire journalistic community of the United States, when we say that the loss of the Times, which has been a heavy one, will be amply made up by the addition of Mr. Hincks to the ranks of the New York Times."

It is hard, it is impossible, for outsiders to comprehend the mysteries of the New York Gold Room. The other day the Globe raised a terrible hullabaloo about gold speculations in New York. By Mr. Kix, the Manager of the Bank of Montreal. Some others of our contemporaries, forgetting for the time that most stories have two sides, and that it is not the part of wisdom to give implicit credence to the one until the other is heard, have already commenced to abuse Mr. Kix in round set terms, and to warn depositors and stockholders that their property is in danger through his "reckless" management.

The dinner to Sir Francis Hincks last evening was all that could have been expected. The dining-room of the Russell House was taxed to its utmost capacity, according to the arrangement of the tables. The dinner itself was in every respect recherche, and the company, such as even Sir Francis Hincks himself might well be proud of.

BANQUET IN HONOUR OF SIR FRANCIS HINCKES. The banquet in honour of Sir Francis Hincks, at the Russell House, last night, was a complete success. The splendid dining hall of the hotel, decorated with, and except the several national banners hung out from the gallery, there was no attempt at ornamentation.

Mr. Gouin, as usual, put up a splendid entertainment. The viands and wines were of most excellent quality. The bill of fare was a most attractive one, embracing every variety and delicacy of the season, and it was universally acknowledged that "Miss" of the Russell House had more than sustained his well-earned reputation as a caterer for the public.

The following is the bill of fare: Porcasso—Consomme de Volaille aux quenelles. Brique de crevettes aux croquettes. Potage—Sauton, sauce Genevoise. Filet de Dore, sauce Hollandaise. Entree—Cotelette de veau aux légumes au petit. Supremes de Volaille aux truffes. Filet de Canard à la Toulouse. Turbot à la Reine, sauce à la Reine. Saumon à la Reine. Saumon à la Reine. Saumon à la Reine.

Colonel Robertson regrets that, being obliged to leave Ottawa, he cannot be present at the banquet in honour of Sir F. Hincks. Letters of apology were also read from Lieut. Col. Wilby, John A. Donaldson, W. F. Lett, and Geo. H. Perry.

fresh water. Indeed, he would say that he believed in one year we would have waterworks in the city of Ottawa. (Cheers.) The Chairman then called on the first vice-chairman, Judge Armstrong, said the toast he proposed was "Canada," and would couple with it the name of Hon. Joseph Howe.
