THE Globe of Saturday has another article devoted to the Bureau of Agriculture, which is professedly a review of certain opinions put forward in this paper, but as it is still PRINCE ARTHUR'S VISIT TO THE altogether silent about the specific charges of maladministration which it brought against the Department some time ago, and which HE VISITS THE MILLS AND THE BI we showed clearly and distinctly to be false in every detail, we have only to judge that no answer is possible. The Globe in this recent article misinterprets some views of RUNS THE SLIDES AND LUNCHES ours with regard to the "legislative" power of the Dominion Parliament, into anothe easy attack upon the "Executive" working of the Department itself. The Globe is no usually wanting either in courage or ability so far as these qualities can support a weak and rotted cause, but in the disingenuousness which has all along characterized its attacks upon the Department of Agriculture, it falls well nigh to the level of the Daily

The demand was at fire made some weeks ago for unconditional protextion, but Mr. BRIGHT and a large section of the press having shown an opposition more than ordinarily vigorous, the protectionists who have organized themselves in the several large cities of the United King com, have now become more moderate in their demands. Mr. Jons Baiger, who now that Conpen is dead, has come to regard himself as in some way the apostle of free trade, and the champion of liberalism in Ecgland, published some short time ago, what may be called a truculent letter against the protectionists and their platform. H says, "there are two classes of people in the world, fools and knaves, and the fools were porn to be the natural prey of the knaves; in England are largely recruited, just now, But it is doubtful if this style of argument coming even from John BRIGHT, will avail much to stem the progress of the protectionis idea, if there be any real strength in it, any more than the open-mouthed scorn and contumely with which Horace Greetey is given to treat his opponents in advocating directly water, will be enough to impede the progress of free trade ideas in the United States. A figures which he produces give an interesting in sight into the progress of certain branches of English trade. For instance, in 1847 be fore free trade, Langashire consumed 26,379 bales of cotton; in 1868 she consumed, in spite of high prices, 53 687 bales. In 1854, the earliest record, in the exports of the Kingdom were £115,821,092 stg.; in 1868 they in fourteen years of free trade. In 1859, the 1859, she imported from France to the amount

The secret of the agitation may be traced, no doubt, to the deep seated anxiety now felt in England with regard to the question of pauperism, which is pressing like an incubus upon the life of the country, and the unsettled state of something quite wond rful. the land question and depressed condition of the agricultural labourer, which has a reflex
