A COMICAL DEER STORY.

A comical story about deerstalking comes to us from Argyleshire. The Duke of Argyle had a tame red deer; Bodyach was on the best of terms with everybody in Inverary; would follow for a little distance like a dog, and never showed any inclination for betaking himself to the hills. The other day he followed one of the men about the castle who was going over to Lochawe side. When Bodyach had gone the length which seemed unto him good, he left the pathway and trotted up to the brow of a knoll, where he lay down, and went to sleep. The man, the retorts, and heat enough to generknowing that Bodyach would either sleep ate steam for the composition of the turn cannily to Inverary, went on his of the manufacture.
