The Alexandria correspondent of the London Telegraph, writing on the 9th of October, supplies the following details of the above named expedition, additional to those already reported :-Three several parts of Sir Samuel Baker's expidition have already left for the rendezvous at Khartoum. The first departure took place about three months' ago, when 1,200 soldiers started from If a man haint got a well-balanced Cairo. This party will be joined by other troops, and on its arrival at Khartoum will form part of a small army of 2,000 infantry, 250 irregular cavalry, or Bashi Bazouks, and three batteries of guns. The infantry will have to perform the whole journey on foot, by short stages along the banks of the canal, and may be expected at Khartoum in December. This party was followed shortly afterwards by a quantity of merchandise, 400 camel loads that was sent by the Korosko desert to Khartoum, to be used for barter with the natives.
