Considering the recent agitation on th subject of Dr. Temples preferment, the public will probably look with unusual curiosity to the first address since deivered by the Bishon-elect to an assem bly of his countrymen. That document we yesterday published, and if we believe it will be read with some little disappoint ment, we mean no disparagement to the principles it expresses, or the ab lity reveals. The truth is it was a special delivery on a special occasion. The peech was not addressed to the clergy. nor did it immediately concern Church, nor did it come from the speakin his episcopal or even clerical capacity. The occasion was simply a farewell interview between Dr. Temple and his neighbours. The "Friendly Socities" ivision of American sympathies took Rugby presented the late master of the school with an address in which they townsman they were about to lose communion as a parishoner rather than a prelate, and talked to the Friendly Societies on the congenial topics the Nicene Creed expressely asserting that association and friendship. The Daily News says it is evident that what the Americans seek is not mere money compensation, but that some apology or retraction, some confession of haste in acknowleding belligerent rights should be put on record for all time But such an apology must either be that of the whole nation for the misdirected sympathies of a part of it, or the Government for some overt act which was either premature or wrong. An apology by the nation for the misdirected sympathies of some of its classes would be not only a new thing in international relations, but would be absurd from a foreign country, when in the commercial capital of their own country a similar place. HERESY. From the London Eng. Spectator. Mr. Voysey has made a remarkably able and a remarkably candid and out. spoken defence of his position as a clergyman of the Church of England, before the Chancellor of the diocese of York. maintaining that his only obligation as minister of that Church is to teach notthing in clear contradiction of any of the Articles of Religion. He seems to hold however, that if he does no verbally condtradict those Articles, it is enough even though he contradicts the clear meaning of them. We should think it more mischievous to English morality than it could by any possibility be favour able to Church comprehension, if this were the real condition of the law. Were it so, there would be nothing at all to prevent a pure Atheist, teaching Atheism, form holding perferment in the Church of England; nor do we imagine what greater intellectual paradox there would be in such a situtation than in that of Mr. Voysey if the Chancellor is right in describing him (according to the Times) as both repeating the Niceme Creed, and openly teaching that the wor-hip of the Son and the Holy Guost is "idoltary"- > aware that there, are very few clergymen accepting every sentence in the Articles in the plain straightforward meaning of common life, and that those few would be far from our best. Still that is a strong reason for immensely simplifying the Articles, not for making assent and denial mean equally little. To come to this-that the most solemn and public expression of belief
