On motion of Mr. MACKENZIE, leave of "Our Mummy," alias " Sappers Bridge," has the address, recently published in our columns Ungratefu' Bard! it is na fair. To crush an audderion' to despair, Because he's growin' worse of wear. Fig ! Fig! on thee : Tut! man, an' has ye yet to learn That youth and age mann have their turn?

When auld, decrepit, weak, and worn, Wi toil and care ; A cauld, ungratofu', warl' may spurn And grind you sair. When first my bonny arch was derked.

My solid wa's all stood erect-Of mason and of " architect," I was the pride None could a flaw in me detect, On ony side.

But weights o' wealth, and " heights o' fashipo. And loads o' grief, and depths o' passion, And words o' love, beyond expression, Hae worn my breast ! E'en state affairs have gee'n their creshin', Aboon the rest.

For forty years," frae shore to shore, The tramp o' mortals I has bore ; And many a gem has passed me q'er. Wi graceful stop. And many a load has tried me sore, To bear it up.

How oft I've been the trysting place, For dashing belles, and lade o' grapa To meet thegither, and embrace, Before high Heaven; Then think, like a the human race, To be forgiven!

Yull many a sad, heart-rending, sigh ; And many a bright, tear-moistened, eye; And many a heart, clate wi joy, Has passed me o'er ; And many a loved one has gobe by. In gang no more!

Oft in the lonely deed of night, I've seen some " poor, o'er-laboured, wight," Wi trembling limbs and glim'ring sight, And look o' care, Stand leaning o'er my topmost height. In silent prayer.

Wi' abucks on my rail reclined-All joys of earth, long since resigned-His white looks shaking i' the wind, Unkempt, uneven, But ah! the sorrows of his mind | Went up to Heaven,

Sad seenes, like this, now passed and gone, Have waked my sympathetic mean; And melted o'en my heart o' stone, O'er human strife-You want the "job;"-then, tak me down-Post sick at life!

The Red River Difficulties.

Toronto Telegraph By a special despatch from $t. Paul we have important and exciting news from Red River. Letters from the Territory state that among the British population there was a feeling of intense dissatisfaction at the elevation of Ruil to the Presidency. It was looked on as an outrage, that the man who was the chief cause of all the trouble, should, while negotiations with Canada were in progress, be placed at the head of affairs. The feeling against him was so strong that an outbreak was imminent. Preparations to resist his authority had already been made. The Euglish and Canadian residents, and the Indians, together with a low loyal French, were, it is nion, Great Britain and Ireland, Newfound- said, organizing under the direction of Major land and Prince Edward Island, can be Boulton. It was thought that an attack on great increase of business in this department are Terrace, Rear street, facing on the Ottawa River

This movement does not surprise us. The this season. They intend enlarging their SHOW only wonder is that an attempt to moset Reill's | ROOM; due notice will e given of their show of authority was not made long ago. According to all accours the loyout-number the disaffected haltbreeds, and we believe they would have taken up arms at the commencement of the troubles, but that they thought a SPRING peaceful settlement might be come to. They have always had the power in their hands, and their only reason for not exercising it was that they were desirous of arranging matters, if at all possible, without the shedding of blood. But this elevation of Riel appears to have been too much for them, and it is now fearest that they will attempt to settle the trouble by force of arms on their own account, without waiting for assistance from While we regret that affairs should have taken such a turn, we are not astonished at it. The only wonder is that the loyal majority hould have so long allowed Rivi to retain a usurp d authority over them, and to play the p try tyrant with such a high hand. If they rally have risen they will probably make short work of the insurgents.
