Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD said, the Finance Minister would tell him if he would only give him a chance. (laughter).

Hon. Mr. HOLTON said, that the hon. gentleman having explained the principal modification proposed, he hoped there would be no further delay.

Mr. MACDONALD, (Glengarry), said he did not think it fair that the Government after agreeing to these resolutions, should supply them only to a few members.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said, the Government had agreed to some of these resolutions. He had told the Bankers that he was not prepared to agree to any of their terms. He had seen none of the Bankers since these resolutions had been put in his hands. It was most extraordinary conduct on the part of the hon. gentleman to imagine that the Government was in any way responsible for the distribution of these papers.

Mr. SCATCHERD said, the resolutions had been supplied only to those members of the House who supported the Bankers in their demand.

Mr. CRAWFORD made further explanations and expressed his regret that there had not been more copies so that each member might have had one. He did not think the interest of the Banks and that of the people were antagonistic. They ought to be one. The Banks were very much interested in having all the Banks solvent, as the failure of one Bank very much shook the credit of the others, so that the Banks were as desirous of solvency as the people. If these resolutions had not been sent to all the members it was not intended as a discourtesy. He hoped this would be satisfactory.

Hon. Mr. DUNKIN thought the time of the House would have been greatly saved if the Hon. Finance Minister had been allowed to explain the modification that was intended to be made in clause four. This clause provides that in case of a suspension of specie payment by a Bank the Directors shall make calls on the shareholders for the amounts they might deem necessary. The amendment proposed was to provide that these calls shall be made within thirty days of suspension.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS then proceeded with his resolutions. He said there were, if he remembered rightly, 26 of these resolutions, ten of which had been passed.

Hon. Mr. HOLTON said they were all passed but four, which were left for consideration.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD had understood that it had been arranged that the discussion of the whole of the resolutions was to be re-opened.

Mr. GIBBS suggested getting over the difficulty by moving the reconsideration of the clauses seriatim.

Mr. CRAWFORD moved the reconsideration of clause four.—Carried.

He then moved in amendment, to insert the words "within thirty days", after the fifth line.

Mr. SCATCHERD wanted to know if this scheme was taken out of the hands of the Government, and had come under the charge of the Bankers (laughter).

Mr. CRAWFORD said he did not know whether the Finance Minister had intended to move the amendment or not. At any rate he (Mr. Crawford) moved it himself.

Mr. BLAKE moved in amendment the insertion of the word "forthwith."

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS thought thirty days was not an excessive time to grant.

Hon. Sir A. T. GALT thought the clause stood very well as it originally was, because it was provided that the calls should be made "without waiting for the collection of debts due, &c."

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD proposed that the time should be set down at ten days.—Carried.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS moved an amendment to the eleventh resolution by striking out the words "and in proxy for voting shall be in force for more than one year from its date," and to add the words "shareholders to be entitled to vote shall hold their stock, for at least three months before the time of voting. Shareholders may vote by proxy, and no person but a shareholder shall be permitted to vote, or act as such proxy; and no manager, cashier, bank clerk or other subordinary officers of a Bank shall either vote in person or by proxy at any meeting for the election of Directors, or hold a proxy for that purpose. Any in existing Banks the scale of voting shall be regulated by their Charters respectively, unless and until the shareholders at any general meeting, voting accordingly to the provisions of their Charters in that respect, determine to change the scale of voting or to give a vote for each share."

Mr. MACKENZIE—That is exactly the Brokers amendment.

Mr. YOUNG said he would move in amendment that proxies shall be terminable at the expiration of one year.

Hon. Mr. HOLTON said the original had his hearty support and full approval, but the change proposed was one he considered reactionary, objectionable and if it was proposed to continue the old scale of voting in all old Banks who chose to reorganize upon the expiration of their Charters, a more vicious amendment was never invented. All Bankers and Joint Stock Companies in the Dominion gave to each share whatever its nominal value or rate, but this was to be changed at the request of asbkers. The Hon. Finance Minister had said he was determined to be independent, that he was not the representative of a class in this country, but the representative of the whole community prepared to set at defiance, Banking interests in full or in part, and now at the dictation of one or two gentlemen who are bankers, he has reversed his policy, and thrown it to the winds in its essential features. This he regretted very much, and at the proper time he would express his opinion upon it, and use the very words of his (Hincks) own resolution in amendment to the resolution given to-day, its present form.

Sir GEORGE E. CARTIER said, member for Chateauguay was too

Mr. What was intended to be done by this amendment was merely with regard to the existing Charters. Power was given to vote share by share, while supposing shareholders were neglectful of the interests of Bank or company, as a majority of shareholders could petition Parliament to modify the Charter, and it was to be presumed that Parliament would listen to them. He coincided with the hon. gentleman that the pecuniary responsibility ought to be with the majority of capital, but this clause submitted did not take away their power of voting according to capital unless they wished it to do so.

Hon. Sir A. T. GALT was understood to say that he held that each share should have a vote, and that he formed this resolution as it first stood.

Mr. BLAKE said capital should give, sights in banking. He had heard that the stockholders asked for this amendment, but only directors and cashiers who had come here, and whose views the Finance Minister had adopted. He regretted very much that it was proposed to alter the resolution, and hoped that the motion of which the hon. member for Chateauguay had given notice would be successful, and the original policy of the Government vindicated.

Mr. CARTWRIGHT said under the present style of voting there was serious restriction, for a man might have ten thousand shares and only fifty votes.

Mr. GIBB concurred in the remarks of the hon. member for Chateauguay, and at the proper time would support his amendment.

Hon. Mr. ABBOTT said they had forgotten the principle of protecting people's property. People had voluntarily subscribed stock with the understanding that the scale of voting was such as mentioned in the Charters, and by this amendment they might be going directly against the wishes of the people and violate the contract which had taken place. He was in favor of giving a vote to each share, but thought it was a matter for domestic regulation.

Mr. HARRISON expressed himself in favour of giving a vote for each share.

Mr. HUNTINGTON taunted the Minister of Finance on his change of base with regard to the Banks. If he were to believe the organs of that hon. gentleman he was to rise superior to any monied institution, but now they found him submitting to the dictation of the Bankers.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said his hon. friend was much mistaken if he had ever supposed that he would not listen to every suggestion coming from the Bankers, and that hon. gentleman would have been the first to find fault with him had he refused to take their suggestions into consideration. He (Huntington) had hinted that he had submitted to dictation from the Bank of Montreal, but the hon. gentleman should remember that this amendment did not emanate from the Bank of Montreal, but from united Banking interests of Montreal, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

Hon. Mr. HOLTON asked if all the Bankers had assented to it, because he happened to know that all the Bankers that had met on the subject had not agreed upon it.

Hon. Sir FRANCIS HINCKS said it had been represented to him that this was the unanimous decision of the Bankers, and he had not heard a single complaint from any shareholder on the subject.

Mr. GIBBS explained, with reference to some remarks made by gentlemen opposite, that he did not speak and vote in the House as a Banker, but as a representative of the people.

Mr. WORKMAN said the imputations throughout against the Bank of Montreal were entirely unjust. This proposal did not originate with that Bank, but came from another Bank some 850 miles distant.

Hon. Mr. HOLTON—It was the Hon. Minister of Finance who had said he was fettered by the Bank of Montreal.

Mr. MACKENZIE said at the outset of the discussion on these resolutions the Finance Minister had told them they would be approved of by the Bankers; now they found him submitting to the dictation of the Bankers, and changing his resolutions in accordance with their views. The great monarch of Banking had not been two hours in the city till it was reported round that the minimum amount of Dominion notes to be held by the Banks, as a reserve was to be reduced, and the Finance Minister had just answered that such an amendment was to be introduced. He would like to know if the fetters were still on that hon. gentleman? and if this legislation was to be subsidiary to a meeting of Bankers. He was glad to hear the remarks of the member for South Ontario; but still he feared there were members who sunk the legislator in the banker.

Mr. CRAWFORD (Leeds), said, if the hon. gentleman referred to him, he indignantly repudiated it. He was there as an independent member, and nothing could induce him to give a vote which considered at variance with the interests of the country. With reference to the amendment, he instanced the legislation of last session with reference to the Gore Bank, and said if that was right in principle then, it was right now.

After some remarks from Hon. Messrs. HOWE and HUNTINGTON, the House rose at 6.

QUICK WORK.—Mr. Fruneau, Superintendent of the factories attached to the Public Works' Department, received instructions on Thursday to construct the temporary reporters gallery for the House of Commons. It is now ready; and he only waits for the dies non of the week to put it up. It may be remembered that the dancing floor of the Senate Chamber, at the late ball, disappeared as if by magic, under his supervision.

"NOS INSTITUTIONS."

From the Ottawa Courier.

Notwithstanding the undeniable fact that many of the upper class merchants of Montreal and Quebec—the Massons, Langevins, Thibaudeaus, Chinics, Tetus, Cuvilliers and others—are French Canadians, the French Canadians, as a class, take very little interest in banking and currency, politically. La Banque Nationale and La Banque du Peuple are French monetary institutions, but they do not seemingly enter into politics like the Banks of Montreal, Ontario, and Quebec, or even the scores of little Banks which are more particularly English in their management. In the debates now going on in the House about banking, finance, reciprocity, protection, or free trade, the speakers are all of the English tongue. Business, in fact, seems altogether to speak English in parliament. A French Canadian epicier is very particular about business matters, and will no more take a bad shilling than will another man, but he never bothers himself about the silver nuisance as an English speaking grocer does. The French language will fight, or discourse upon science speculate on or in theology, legislate or administer law, or indulge in prose or verse disquisitions upon matters requiring philosophical consideration; but the French mind evidently does not dwell on the price of wheat, petroleum, or coal, after the manner of the English mind. There is a great difference between the two peoples, now living together so harmoniously in Canada. The military genius of the French is unmistakeably evident in the selection of all the strong or weak points of defence or offence which they have selected along the St. Lawrence and the Lakes. The mercantile genius of the English is seen in the localities where they await to exact toll as it were from imports and exports. The money-producing power in Canada seems to be the English speaking trader and politician. This is curious rather than a matter of consequence. There has been no Finance Minister in Canada whose vernacular is French. There does not seem to be enough of the Jew about the French character for speculation. The first Finance Minister who taught France herself the use of paper money was a Scotchman. Railway bubbles or monetary enterprises of any kind do not appear to be a Frenchman's forte. There seems to be some fault in the language. The French are decidedly ingenious; they are wealthy and full of resources. They are powerful as a people, but they do not speculate in flour or pig-iron or coal, like an American, or an Englishman. It is really a matter of wonder that not a word is said in the House, or or against any financial policy by gentlemen whose mother tongue is French. There are no more fluent speakers than the members of the House of Commons of French extraction, nor any better informed men on general subjects, but they seem to take no interest in dollar politics and to leave all canals and railroads even to be manipulated by others. They can make but they cannot manage. They are not at home in the "kite" market and are almost strangers to the Exchange. This must not always be so. The French have other stakes in the Dominion besides notre langue, nos institutions, et nos lois.

QUEBEC.

Quebec, March 11.

The lecture on "Words of Cowper," delivered last evening at Morin College, by new Dr. Cook, drew a large assemblage. The lecture was both instructive and amusing.

An investigation is going on this morning at the Police Court relative to an alleged case of forgery. A young man, of a respectable family, was employed by his mother to collect her rents. In one payment he obtained a cheque for $40. He drew more, using a portion of it to pay a pressing debt. He then placed the forged cheque in the Quebec Bank, intending, as he says, to make up the deficit next day. In the meantime the cheque was presented for payment, and the Bank prosecutes for forgery. The young man has been hitherto considered trustworthy, and as the act takes the form more of youthful indiscretion than premeditated crime, no other facts need be stated until the legal evidence becomes public.

The rates of the PROVINCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY are as low as its long experience has shewn to be profitable.

The cost of the value of insurance is, however, not when the premiums are being paid, but when losses are being settled, and, from the equity and promptness of its settlements the Provincial Insurance Company is second to none.

The Inspectors are always out to adjust every important loss directly it occurs.

It has no adjusted losses due and unpaid.

It respectfully solicits a share of the patronage of the insuring public of Ottawa.
