EMIGRATION FROM IRELAND.

A succinct, enterprising, with the caption of "Canada—A Field for Irish Emigration," appears in Sauder's News-Letter, over the signature of "James G. Moylan," Canadian Emigration agent in Ireland. Mr. Moylan informs his readers that he has not the slightest intention of misleading anybody. Canada is no place for the idle or dissolute, but it is the place above all others—the United States, Australia, or the Islands—for the Irish emigrant in Canada, his religion, if he be a Roman Catholic, is protected; the personal liberty of the man religiously and politically is guaranteed; there is room for honest labor everywhere, and the country is capable of producing every necessary and abundance of the luxuries of life; taxation is comparatively light, work plentiful, and food cheap. Thus is Canada's word. It is an available country to the steady, willing, poor man. It is in climate far more healthy, and decidedly more agreeable to the feelings than the climate of Ireland. The cold is an advantage, not a drawback, and it is a country in which no person need be left out in the cold. Mr. Moylan, we presume, quotes a letter from Sir John A. Macdonald, to reply to a letter addressed to him by Mr. Moylan. Sir John says—

ENGLAND AND HER STRENGTH.

It is impossible to tell what may or may not grow out of the present seemingly insignificant disturbance at Red River. The situation, however, is not free from difficulties and there are people enough to attempt to complicate them. Clearly the interference of the United States was not permitted Rights, under cover of Fenianism, or anotherism cannot take place without involving a disturbance of international relations. It will not be permitted to sympathize with whatever operations may be considered necessary for the reduction of the part of British North America, known as the North West Territory, to order. Any granting of tendencies towards the extension of United States control will be fatal, say checkers at what cost, and it can be done successfully. If the population of the Dominion is only 4,000,000 as compared with the 40,000,000 who inhabit the United States, the United Kingdom and her dependencies are inhabited by hundreds of millions and the population of the three Kingdoms alone, is within 4 millions as much as that of the entire United States. India, while at the time of the war of American independence, the revenue of Great Britain was nine millions, it is now 64 millions, and while the United States and France have together a coast line of 160,000 miles, England has a coast line of 30,000 miles. England lies the great strength of England. That the United States should attempt to equalize this coast line in some measure is not to be wondered at. That England, should for a moment, entertain the idea of diminishing her strength is surprising. Nevertheless it is true that Eng is so strong now as a center of commercial supremacy, is sacrificing the very means which has made her politically, "the Queen of nations." The Americans are hourly becoming more aggressive. To use the words of the Scandinavian "the execulsive desire of the people of the United States to acquire new territory at any cost is well enough proved by many recent events. They have added to themselves S. Thomas, San Domingo, Mexico, and Alaska. They look forward to the almost immediate possession of Cuba, and with the possession of San Domingo, according to some theories, the fate of the West Indies is linked. Fortunately Great Britain is yet in a position to check somewhat this aggressive attitude of the United States. The difficult and crooked path upon which the United States is entering must be well seen to. It is neither in the interest of Europe or that part of it called Britain, that the West Indies should fall into the possession of the United States, and that by a series of crooked manœuvres the highway to the riches of the East over the American continent should be monopolized by the United States. It will never be permitted. The supremacy of Great Britain upon the ocean must all at her supremacy on the land. England never was better tried to protect her fisheries, to facilitate commerce, and to expand and increase the power of her distant possessions than she is now. She cannot safely allow to get at an extensive dominion upon this number of islands than those that lie to the north of Scotland and the islands to the south of Ireland. It would be a special fault to Irland to sacrifice any portion of her sea coast, or any other encroachment on the line 45 deg., more than there be. England cannot afford to lose, in a military sense, that which is particularly hers—the sea. England is home upon the mountain wave, and it is a great consolation to know that there, at least, England has still room to grow. People are ignorantly afraid of the growing power of the United States. That power, however, to be checked, not tested, England is expanding with a rapidity which is perfectly startling, but there is still cohesion, and the separate parties have a hand to hold together. Furthermore, it would be most unwise for us to do so. The strong, however, only can afford to be weak. A little more rope will possibly finish Mr. B. and international difficulties may be completely overcome.

EASTER RECESS.

The most exciting cannot say that the members have not been a bit sufficiently employed this session. With very few exceptions, the House sat at every night till mid-night and on till nearly two in the morning. It seems, then, too, that not too much that the members are disposed to sit, namely, that on Wednesday next the House shall adjourn till the following Tuesday. Very little time will be lost by this, Thursday is Holy Thursday on which, although not a statutory holiday, many feel they should make fitting preparation for the solemnities of Good Friday Monday is Easter Monday, which is, as well as Friday a feast d'obligation to our Lower Canadian friends, and in which no sitting can take place. It has been settled that the members of the Lower Provinces have no opportunity of spending their half holiday with their families, and that, therefore, it would be unfair to them that there should be a single day taken beyond those fixed on by law on which the House cannot sit. But we understand that many of these gentlemen propose to visit Ontario, where they may be sure of a hearty reception; they are anxious to see something of the agricultural resources of the country as practically shown at the Easter market. They will not be found unwilling, we believe, to take a little relaxation from which they will return braced up for the arduous work still before them. We would, further suggest, that as the trains do not usually reach here till the afternoon session is nearly closed, that it might be well for the House not to meet for business till half past seven. It will give those desirous of being in their places an opportunity of being so, without compelling them to hurry back to catch the train arriving here in the forenoon.

they can to secure for us the encouragement of our citizens.

Mr. Freeman Talbot, formerly of London, writes from Cleveland, Minnesota, to the London Herald on the affairs at Red River. In the course of a long letter, brimming of Canadian indignation, he makes the following remarks:

"Here in the United States, I have publicly and privately sympathized with young Ireland. Dr. Schlesinger, of Boston, and others, that Britain, subject to the first time in my memory, have cried in vain to the constitutional authorities of their country for protection. I am glad that Mr. Mackenzie had the courage to speak out in his place in the House, and to protest that his remarks were received with such enthusiasm by the friends of the Government. He was in full view of the man religiously and politically is guaranteed; there is room for honest labor everywhere, and the country is capable of producing every necessary and abundance of the luxuries of life; taxation is comparatively light, work plentiful, and food cheap. Thus is Canada's word. It is an available country to the steady, willing, poor man. It is in climate far more healthy, and decidedly more agreeable to the feelings than the climate of Ireland. The cold is an advantage, not a drawback, and it is a country in which no person need be left out in the cold. Mr. Moylan, we presume, quotes a letter from Sir John A. Macdonald, to reply to a letter addressed to him by Mr. Moylan. Sir John says—

"I am sorry to hear that the Emperor has not yet given consent to that order of proceedings."

The strike at La Crosse continues. It reports that all mines in the Valley of the Cedar will strike.

A committee has been appointed to investigate and draw up a report on the sale of properties in the army.

FRANCE.

FARM.—The Emperor visited the public exhibition of horses to-day, and apprised quite well.

The question of substituting the plebiscite for the Chamber before it is voted by the people is not settled.

The Emperor has not yet given consent to that order of proceedings."

The strike at La Crosse continues. It reports that all mines in the Valley of the Cedar will strike.

Another inauguration meeting is called for this evening.

The oppositionists are pulling the wires to get up an excitement against the Government.

A special to the Telegraph from St. Paul says two more Canadians have arrived.

They left Fort Garry on the 13th March, and have been on the road ever since. Among them are J. Coombs, Wm. F. Allen, and Mrs. George Young, wife of the Rev. Mr. Young, who still remains in Fort Garry.

Mrs. Schulte is still at the lower settlement, in feeble health.

Mr. Coombs says the half-breeds, who have been born in the United States, are becoming suspicious of him, and fear he will sell all the Hudson's Bay Company's property, and leave his men in the lurch.

They denounce the shooting of Scott, and say there was no excuse nor plausible pretext for the crime.
