

ORGE'S DAY.

was all that could be done.

Assembling at the hotel, the members of the National and English clubs, selected by lot, were drawn to the various parts of the city, and were scattered along the line of the river, with the result that the river was filled to overflowing.

The day was filled with scenes of great interest, and the public were greatly interested in the proceedings.

The interval was spent in a variety of amusements, including a grand ball at the Hotel Ottawa, and a grand dinner at the Hotel Royal York.
