He said he addressed them as an old soldier, as a regu lar and a volunteer he had serv d at home and abroad and although he did not wear the famed red coat as of ld, he felt the soldier's spirit rise up in his heart at the sight of it, as the sound of the bugle inspirited the war horse in the battle. The grand courage that has always led the British soldier on to victory, united alike in the hearts of the officers and lowliest pri vate, and should the murderous cut throat Fenians again make their appear ance, no matter what their number, they will be met with the same spirit by the brave 43rd, that had ever characterized the British army. He spoke at some length of the deeds of the 43rd in former times, their gallantry and courage, and concluded by saying he was sure the 43rd Carleton battalion would uphold the honor of their regiment when and wherever they were called upon to fight for their Queen and country (loud cheers).

Col. Forrest being called on said he had known the 43rd for a number of years. He had seen them on service, and what his friend, Mr. Ryan, had said he could sustain, and more, he could say that the gallant 43rd was one of the bravest battalions in the British army. He spoke of the deeds of their forefathers at Ciudad Rodrigo. He would not speak of the 43rd Carleton battalion as militia men. Their period turn out, and no doubt their deeds if they were called on to fight would surpass the deeds of the 43rd of old, and would wear their colours with the same honor, (cheers).

Mr. Corbett said they all knew him at the front as the fat Major. He was not going to make a speech, as he was better able to fight than to speak. He knew the men of the 43rd for a long time, and could speak with a certainty that if they were called into action they would act in such a manner that their country would be proud of them. He was not as fleet or as fast on his feet as were others of their officers, but if he could not advance very fast he would never retreat. He reverted to the conduct of the Carleton battalion at the front with pride, and thought with more drill the 43rd could not be surpassed in courage and efficiency. After some more remarks he concluded with wishing them a happy return to their homes and families, and was loud and long cheered.

Lieut. Barlow read a complimentary address from the commanding officer to the 43rd, and then proposed the health of C.L. Bearman, which was received with loud cheers. He then spoke to the men as to his strictness with them at the front, shewing the necessity of strictness in drill, and thought there was not a man among them who could bear a hard feeling towards him on account of it. He had no doubt but that if they were called out again they would at once chose him as their Adjutant. (Cheers and laughter.)

Capt. Morgan being called on, addressed the men in a short speech complimented them on their having such good officers to lead them, and the efficient state of the whole Battalion and concluded by stating that five of the companies had to be at the station in half an hour, and he would conclude by wishing them all a happy return to their homes and families (cheers).

After short speeches from Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Cadd, the men dispersed well satisfied with their reception by their fellow citizens and countrymen.

The Tribune's Washington special says there was a full attendance at the Cabinet session yesterday.

The San Domingo and Samana Bay matters were under consideration.

It is understood the Cabinet are unanimous in urging upon the Senate the adoption of the treaty.

The President announced his intention to be absent from the city for a few days next week.

The President in his message to the Senate upon the annexation of San Domingo, refers to a foreign power that is ready to purchase that territory at $2,000,000 if we fail to ratify a treaty of annexation. In addition to this information is received that an English company of commercial men have made a proposition to pay all the expenses of the Government of San Domingo, and to take charge of the exports and imports, they having the right to fix the rate of duties, &c., thus getting control of the commerce of that territory.

It is said that the Senate will probably amend the treaty now pending in various matters, but generally conformable to the suggestions contained in the President's message, so that the treaty will have to go back to the San Domingo Government for concurrence.

Police Court—Saturday.—One of the oldest cases of Police Court fame in Ottawa was brought up this morning, charged with being drunk—she was found on the road leading to Parliament Hill, at the end of Sapper's Bridge, taking a happy sleep with a bottle under her head. The unfortunate and apparently repentant creature was some years ago of a rather tarnished character. She left the city, and after about a year's absence reappears; and now she is gone to spend a couple of months in prison at hard labor.

The offender in a case of drunk was condemned to pay $2 and costs, or in default to pass two weeks in jail.

A case of assault between two small boys is adjourned to Monday.

Drowned.—We are sorry to have to chronicle an event which will be deeply regretted by the majority of the citizens. Yesterday morning at about 6:30, while some boys were bathing in the Ottawa river, back of Mr. Gilmour's residence, they discovered a suit of clothes on a ledge rocks on the bank. On examining the pockets a letter was found addressed to Mr. J. F. Boulton. The alarm was at once given and search made for that gentleman, and he was no where to be found. A number of boats with grappling irons were at work all evening in search of the body, as no one seems to have any doubt but that he has been drowned. Up to the time of writing this there had been no trace of the missing man, it is supposed he had went into the waterto bathe and took a cramp and went down. A suit of clothes belonging to Mr. Peter Cowan, a member of No. 1 Battery of the Ottawa Garrison Artillery was also found on the shipping wharf of Messrs. Perley & Pattee on Saturday morning—the owner is missing, and it is feared he has been drowned while bathing. A man named Joseph Mathew, in the employ of Mr. Baldwin, fell of the shipping wharf, and was drowned in the presence of twenty-five or thirty men. He is about 19 years of age, and formerly lived in 13 Jacques Cartier street, Montreal.
