NAPOLEON IN DANGER.

From the Figure.

the three Prussian corps from marching in company, but it took place some twenty ceived the Mayor and Sub Prefect of Verdun, gave them some encouragement, and left for the station with the Prince Imperial, almost without escort. There he asked that a train should be prepared.

" Sire," said the station master, " I have content myself with that," replied his Majesty. He even refused to have one of the cushions from his carriage placed on the boarded seat; but he asked for a glass of wine. The railway official washed the glass he had used for his breakfast and offered it. The Prince Imperial very much fatigued, wished to wash his hands and face. No other vessel could be found just used. With this filled with water, not seem to be moved in the slightest degree by this excessive simplicity. A locomotive was sent forward to assure the passage of the train to Mourmelon. When the Emperor had left, one of the officers of his household arrived and demanded two trains for his men, his carriage, and horses. "You will add," he said, "a first class carriage for me." "Monsieur," replied the station master, " His Majesty was satisfied with a third class one. You will understand that ! have nothing better, to offer you than a luggage truck." Thus, on the 17th, before daybreak, the Empe-

French Want of Organization,

The special power with which we have been accustomed to credit our friends and neighbors across the channel is the power wounded in this terrible war. But, not withstanding the intervention of the highest authority, the only result schieved has been to place the direction of these efforts under the orders of the overweighted

" Intendance Generale," and the society in Paris has been condemned to the grief of remaining almost impotent in the presence of urgent and universal calls for the aid which it is eager but forgiven to give. Of the four complete ambulances which it has equipped, only one has been as yet placed in a position to render any service. M. Nelaton declared long ago, for weeks in such a matter count as years -to the Senate that the wounded around and the number of military surgeons has been announced to be deficient. But forms have been so multiplied and delays so prolonged that professors, surgeons, and dressers, who applied to be allowed to serve at the very outset of the war, and who asked only for the opportunity of de-ness and biting their nails with vexation in official anti-chambers. Even in the matter of accepting the offer of individuals to re-

Society has been unable to fulfil its mis sion. On all sides private persons offered beds, surgeons offered their services. On the network of the Lyons Ralway M. Deulposable, and 160 medical men who had of fered themselves for the work. But the bureaucratic obstacles have been too great and the suffering of the wounded on the French side have been frightfully aggra-

" The Devastation,"

An English paper says: Up to the pre-sent time upwards of 500 men, including all classes of mechanics, &c., have been entered at Portsmouth dockyard under the Admiralty Minute for increasing the labor strength of the principal yards, and it is satisfactory to notice that with this large addition the work in hand is being rapidly formidable from their capabilities to per-unarmored screw frigate Blonde, 4,039 tons; and the Comet and Blazer, two gun-vessels of the Staunch type, of 212 tons each, which represent the first serious at-Portsmouth. The Devastation is a navy in compliance with the strongly ex-pressed opinions of the Premier and the First Lord of the Admiralty that the navy of England should include weapons of war capable of delivering irresistible blows at any directed point, no matter whether that point should be on any part adjacent to our own shores or on a spot a couple or three thousand miles away. The monitors of the Devastation class will not be ocean-cruising turret frigates like the Monarch and Captain. They will be held in hand for any special service. With 1,200 tons of their turrets, and engines of 800 nomina horse power for their propulsion, they can be kept in port, at Sheerness, Portsmouth, Plymouth, Queenstown, Gibraltar, Malts, or Bermuda, for instance, and when wanted, sent out on their work. A Devastation kept thus ready at Portsmouth would be able to steam as far as Malta, fight any antagonist she might be sent to meet, and return to Portsmouth without coaling.

This is the weapon the present Ministry have added to our naval armoury.
