the Queen, accompanied by her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice, and attended by Lord Charles Fitzroy and the Marchioness of Ely, left Windsor Castle at a quarter to eleven o'clock, in order to visit the Empress of the French at Chislehurst. The Queen drove to the Windsor terminus of the London and South Western railway. and was received at the station by Mr. W. M. Williams, superintendent of the line, Mr. Beattie, Mr. Jacomb, and Mr. Chees. man, station master, and conducted to the royal saloon in which her Majesty took her seat with Princess Bestrice. The special train consisted of a fast narrow gauge lo-comotive, two royal saloons, and four other carriages provided by the directors of the South Western line, and furnished with Mr. Preece's system of electrical communication. A number of ladies and spectators assembled to witness the Queen's departure for Chislehurst. Her Majesty and the Princess quitted Windsor at 10:50 a.m., precisely, and proceeded rapidly over the South Western line viz Staines, Richmond, and Clapham Junction, to Waterloo, which was reached at 11:35 a.m., and where, under the supervision of Mr. Cockburn, the engine was changed for one belonging to the South Eastern Rail-way Company. The journey was resumed at 11:38, and Chislehurst was reached at 11:55. Royal carriages sent from Windsor were in readiness at the station, and in these Her Majesty and the Princess drove to Chislehurst. At the close of the visit the Queen and Princess took leave of the Empress, and drove back to Chislehurst station, where the special train had in the meantime been waiting. Her Majesty left
