BRITAIN'S COLONIAL EMPIRE

The colonies or dependencies of Great Britain are fortunately beginning to pay. Notwithstanding the withdrawal of troops and the abandonment of fortresses, these attached and inalienable allies of England are making progress. From 1853 to 1871 the total expenditure on the colonies came, in round numbers, to £44,000,000, and the total value of the exports to M.P., of Ballykilbeg, Ireland £450,000,000 sterling. This is surely something of which a nation, such Master Mr. G. F. Smith, on his left sat as England, may be proud.
