A number of Imperialist papers and pamphlets have been issued in Paris. The agents of the British and Foreign Bible Society in Turkey, have been ordered to leave the country...

Imperial Parliament will be prorogued on Saturday next at two o'clock. The Emperor Napoleon has come to stay at Nogent a watering place in Sussex.

President Grant was at Ogdenburg yesterday. A woman was murdered under the most horrible circumstances in Illinois last Monday.

U. S. Senator Chase is seriously ill. The American fleet has left Southampton for Coosweg, from which port it is expected to cross to Gravesend.

It is stated that Sir John Ross is created a baronet in recognition of his long services to the Empire.

Mr. Tim, of the Finance Department, leaves to-day for British Columbia, to organize a branch of the Department there.

Mr. Masson, of Terrebonne, and Mr. Abbott, of Argenteuil, both Ministerialists have been released by parliament.

Mr. J. W. King succeeds Mr. O'Neill, as Chairman of the Board of Penitentiary Directors.

A glorious victory in Essex, for full particulars concerning which see our telegraphic columns.

We find we were wrong in announcing Mr. St. George, M.P. for Portneuf as an Opposition candidate, he having announced himself a supporter of the Government.

It is now too late to publish any further accounts of the Boston Jubilee. Were this not so, we should be tempted to find room in our columns for the remarkably graphic description of that event furnished to the Standard by an Ottawa correspondent.

We have been given to understand that it is the production of one of the highest officials in the Marine and Fisheries Department, who has for some years been connected with the Standard, and whose literary attainments are well known and appreciated here.

SOUTH RENFREW. We can imagine few positions more humiliating to a politician than that which Mr. Ross Macdougall, the late member for South Renfrew, has chosen to assume.

Although as compared with his present opponent, Mr. O'Reilly, he is a mere pigmy in point of intellect, and although so far as political ability or presence is concerned he can never rise above mediocrity, Mr. Macdougall is not devoid of some common sense and shrewdness, and is in many respects qualified to occupy a respectable and prominent position in the county.

Coming to Parliament as he did, young, and presumably independent and untrammelled, it might have been supposed that his career would have been a creditable and auspicious one. It might have been imagined that Mr. Macdougall would have been disposed to make use of that ability, which, although not very apparent on the surface, his friends claim that he possesses and the existence of which we are not disposed to deny.

It might have been assumed that he would have adopted an independent course and not have become the slave of those old prejudices of party which destroy the usefulness of too many members of the House. But no. From the first moment when Mr. Macdougall entered Parliament he took his seat upon the left hand of the Speaker, he has been the bond servant of Mr. George Brown and his henchman, Mr. Mackenzie. From the latter Mr. Macdougall has received his instructions as to how to vote, and from the Globe he has drawn all his inspirations. He has acted as far as political matters are concerned, as a free agent. To the interests of the Dominion, the interests of the constituency which he is supposed to represent, he cannot devote his attention.

To promote the interests of the party to which he has sworn allegiance to carefully watch Mr. Mackenzie's movements when he is in the House during a division, rising when he rises, and sitting still when he remains quiescent, this is the extent of Mr. Ross Macdougall's political knowledge, and about all the services which he has rendered to the country or his constituents. The interests of South Renfrew might, to all intents and purposes, as well be represented in the House of Commons by an automaton which would rise up and vote whenever the member for Leith would sit up. We repeat that there are few more humiliating signs than to see a young member of the House of Commons, from whom all events during a division, rising when he rises, and sitting still when he remains quiescent, this is the extent of Mr. Ross Macdougall's political knowledge, and about all the services which he has rendered to the country or his constituents.

THE QUEBEC ELECTION RESULTS.

The Quebec Chronicle furnishes the following particulars of the Quebec election results. At about half past twelve o'clock there was a meeting of the local lights and men in the suburbs. Shortly afterwards the St. John's Ward polling-house, No. 1, was taken possession of, and the invading troops marched down the street to the St. John's Hotel. The flag at Mr. Ross's Committee Room, at L'Esplanade, was first torn down. At the Madisons the rough fighting began. The Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes, and the white Union flag announcing Mr. Ross's candidature, were all in the air. The flag at the St. John's Hotel was also torn down. The flag at the St. John's Hotel was also torn down. The flag at the St. John's Hotel was also torn down.

while the mounted section of B. Battery hunted after children. They looked nice as they picked their way through the crowd. There were a few shots, but no serious injuries. The flag at the St. John's Hotel was also torn down. The flag at the St. John's Hotel was also torn down. The flag at the St. John's Hotel was also torn down.

at Couillard street was made a point of attack by the Cauchon men, and here the first fighting of the day really began. As the rough men advanced, the Cauchon men, who were armed with clubs and stones, met them. They stopped their fighting, and went to their homes. But some did not go to their homes. They remained there, and some of them were killed.
