rested in the afternoon by Detective O'Neill. On hearing him he was observed to throw something from him into a pile of stones. Detective O'Neill asked him to deliver up the money which had been given him. He answered that money? what in h— money have I got? Detective O'Neill looked among the stones and found $40, and on searching his person found $20 more.

DR. LIVINGSTONE'S LETTERS. (Daily Telegraph, July 29.) Our pages are to-day once more enriched with the best of all romance writing, that is to say, with true stories of unknown lands, wonderful adventures and people whose very names and existences are now for the first time mentioned in our ears.

The most novel strike on record is that of the clerical men of Wilmington, Del. These gentlemen have formed themselves into a Federal Trade Union, and adopted the following resolutions: "That only the hour for the beginning of the funeral service be published, and that promissaries on the part of all is very desirable; that a carriage be sent for and placed at the service of the minister; that the position of the minister during the funeral service be left to his own discretion; that the selection of the Lord's day for funerals be discontinued."

In answer to questions by Mr. Lees, Dr. Sweetland said: "The wound at the angle of the eye was caused by some blunt instrument. From the examination he came to the conclusion it was caused by repeated blows. The side of the face was so bruised that it was impossible to say whether the wound was caused by a single blow or by repeated blows."

The geographical discoveries of these three last years are here set down with such clearness that, if an explorer toward a word more, the gain to science would still be vast. What Livingston calls the "waterhead" of the Nile extends some 100 miles westward and eastward to a forest of old belt of upland from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea.
