Any man who does this will be astonished to find now very few, comparatively speaking have come out as determined opponents of the Government or have expressed the opinion that a change of administration is desirable Even among those whom the Globe and the other Grit organs claim as members of the Opposition there are few who did this.

Bearing in mind the great fact that the Government, having appealed to the country, have been sustained, and are likely to command as large a majority in the House of Commons next session as they did last session, the question for every one who is possessed of any political influence, (and there are few among as who have not some,) is, "what is the most which had served to convince him that he To the Right Honourable Sir John Alexan asy, that at the Seat of Government they vessels out in the time desired.
