SPECIAL NOTICES. THE EXODUS FROM ALSACE. The local papers of the conquered provinces give a very different representation of the aspect of the country from the Times correspondent. Writing as the latter does, from Strasbourg, he has never, perhaps, been brought into direct contact with the stream of emigrants, and has possibly had no opportunity of judging for himself. It is natural to suppose that many of the views which have been witnessed of late in Alsace, and the influence of the local press, Editor of the 2nd inst., published in Lamerica, says the words of the emigrants, and that these last few days have been such as to recall the great popular emigrations of former times.
