What they rable, while at the same time, goods i think of us in England is in some respect a serious matter to Canadians, but we do not want them to think of us at all until they have the facts before them upon which to form a judgment. We have 7 a. m some right to expect this treatment even from the Times. But no matter what they think of us. Canadians do not forget that their present Premier has been within a few months of wenty years in office. They can turn upon Englishmen and ask them when was one man a leader of the Government for nineteen, or even seventeen successive rears? No matter what they think of us across the great hig lake, it is evident by the repeated renewals of confidence manifested by the people of Canada, that they have thought a good deal of their own, and they, despite the London Times, are

OUR STREETS.

We have already alluded to the question of street paying : but the subject is one frequently brought before the attention of the citizens. The system of street paving at present in vogue, is the most expensive that could possibly be pitched upon, for the time being it may appear cheap, but in the long run the cost is double what it would be if the proper system were in itiated, and now is just the time at which this matter should be seriously considered The city having decided upon laying down water pipes and drains, the present road+ bed, if such name can be given to the superstructure of our streets, must be very much broken up by the necessary excavations; afterwards the question of repaying will of course be one of paramount importance, and our citizens must consider whether they will allow the present expensive and imperfect system of road making to continue.

There are of course a great variety of but we believe the cheapest, and the best, fully recovered. His injuries, though off his S's a little. In Europe asphalt is extensively used for road making, and so far as billiard table, thus forming the most ly dealt with according to law.
