The old adage that troubles never come so reluctantly that they refused to retire which the Ottawa lumber operators find they are casting about them for a remedy but we fear that one or two of their remedial suggestions are open to some standard obthe general, or, we might say the national, interest, is assailed. We are fully aware great private interest come to reason are identical. But it is our duty, while may find expression in the sense that a country cannot be too conservative in that branch of its policy affecting its resources. There is not a system of economics adapted to the nation, and another by which the private citizen may guide himself The principle that governs in the fiscal policy of a country is precisely indentical with that which must direct the administrator of a private fortune. In the case before us, therefore, in which the country is found dealing with an opposing private interest, about a matter closely affecting its resources, the Government is bound to hold to the side of prudence, to preserving and perpetuating its sources of wealth, and by no means to be guilty of the folly of killing the goose that laid the

DEAR SIE, - A correspondent supposing the (itizen of yesterday, under the heading of His Worship's little game," that I have coquetted "with the Liberal-Conservatives hoping to secure a nomination ! them, but when I found that Dr. Hill into the arms of the Reform League and from them accepted a nomination.' He also mentions the names of ten gentlemen as supporters of mine, when fact only two of their number have ever spoken to me on the subject of Mayoronservatives or with the Reformers, and accepting a nomination from the latter after being denied by the former, how this assertion consistent with the action taken by Mr. Hill's friends in making the canvess? Have they not repeatedly stated to my friends that Dr. Hill was only selected after I had refused to accept a nomination from them? Have they not repeatedly and constanly used argument to induce some of my strongest supporters to pledge themselves upport their nominee? How the could I have coquetted with the Liberal an Conservatives, and how could I have been discarded by them and Dr. Hill selected my stead, if their assertions respecting my efusal of a nomination are true? Either the Citizen correspondent is wrong, or Dr. Hill's friends are misrepresenting me to the electors. Everybody, I trust, will admit the correctness of the dilemma.

And now, Mr. Editor, as there are conflicting statements and rumours about the overtures that were 'made to me condemned Administration can be found fence around what we have." Without elections, I might as well state at once following out that suggestion, in our own the facts as they are and not as some case, to the letter, it would be only the people take upon themselves to represent

About five or six weeks ago some lead ing gentlemen in Upper Town called upon me and inquired whether I intended to years, and the feeling about the city being chosen among the English speaking population should fill the civic chair for 1874. I would not offer myself for the position, but, if, however, the people desired my re-election, I would accept, as I was anxious that all the great mprovements now going on in this city and commenced since I was elected Mayor should if possible, be completed while continued to hold the office. This, Mr The organs of the Tory party do not ven- Editor, was my invariable answer to all questions put to me respecting my intentions until Dr. Hill was nominated. Thereupon several deputations called upon me and urged me to allow myself to be presented. I did not immediately accept, not wishing to contest an election under the circumstances, particularly as I did not apwas taking. I also stated that my affair

At the same time, being pressed by another deputation, and being urged to accept of a nomination as a person unconnected with any political association, and being desirous myself that politics should be discarded in the conduct of municipal affairs, as otherwise the duty of a Mayor and Corporation to the city would only be secondary to their duty to any political party to whom they would owe their elections, I finally consented and published my card to that effect in last Saturday's issue Since then I have had conversations with many of our citizens, as well with Liberals Conservatives as Reformers, and again repeated to them that unless I saw that it was the desire of the people that I should remain in the field, that I would retire : but now. Mr. Editor, such are the assurbest the Tory party can do, in opposition | ances that I have received, so favorably was my candidature accepted (Dr. Hill's friends to the contrary, notwithstanding) by the people generally of all political shades, that I am convinced I am the choice of the majority, and I therefore cannot and will not withdraw from the contest but will go to the polls, feeling satisfied that shall head the same by a very handsome
