THE LITTLE MRS -- PICTURE

Mr. R. D. Ewing of Ewing & Co., picture framers, Toronto, recently wrote to Globe, informing the public that the picture of "little Mrs .-- " which has figured so largely in the ribald charges of . Mr. Charles Hykert against the Commisnot purchased by Mr. McKellar at all. Of course the matter was one which would not have occupied ten minutes attention from anybody-the waspish little member for Lincoln excepted-and the simple fact of its being made to do duty in the in terests of the Ontario Opposition, only shows their poverty of matter with which afflicted. The impudence which led Mr. Rykert to explore the private rooms of the Commissioner of Agriculture might t improbably lead him, when in some ther place where he had equally little business, to do something more than look at things-especially if they were of any value. We have never heard yet how he come to get into the said room-whether it was by invitation or without it - whether Mr. McKellar was present or whether Mr. Rykert was alone-whether he entered by window. If he was invited, and Mr. Mc-Kellar was there, Mr. Rykert must be a very If he went without invitation, he would be a very undesirable person to be allowed to continue at large, However, Mr. Ewing shows that all the bile of the member for Lincoln has been wasted upon Mr. Mc-Kellar to no purpose, for the picture was bought by the late Hon. John Sanfield Mactime the one was Premier the other a Speaker of the Legislature of Untario, and it must appear pretty hard to find one single transaction. The corruptionist organ in aged his assertion, when, it pointed out proof but is satisfied with precisely such mew, penal laws, and oppression that the pictures were not placed in possession of the Government until the year December, 1871, and all framed and hung and bill rendered by the 27th of January, 1872, or little over a month—not a very long time, he thinks, when it is remembered that there were over thirty gold on the seals of office as long frames to make to enable them to complete the order.
