Another Strange Abduction.

NEWPORT R. I., August 28.

At the commencement of the season two Indian women with three small children, one girl and two boys, came to this city and pitched a tent in which to live upon the bathing beach, near the ticket office. The children were left to play in and about the tent, while the women went about the city and offered for sale ladies' fancy baskets and other trinkets peculiar to the Indians. They belong to a tribe who are located at Liverpool, Nova Scotia.

One of the children above referred to was an interesting and beautiful girl, of about nine years, whom one of the women Mrs. Lizzie Charles adopted when she was four years of age. Her mother having died, her father, marrying again, gave her to her to bring up, and she consented, as she had no children of her own. The other two children are Indians and belong to Mrs. Charles' business partner.

On Friday all three of the children were at play in the vicinity of the tent, when a well-dressed gentleman took the girl by the hand, and asked her if she did not want to take a walk with him? She answered "No;" but at his promise to her to purchase some candies for her she consented. He immediately took her inside the tent and removed her outside garments, which were very shabby, and replaced them with new ones, which he had brought with him, and which go to prove that he knew of the whereabouts of the girl.

He walked rapidly up the hill that leads from the beach with his prize, and as it was nearly dark he did not attract much attention from the passers by. Some of the townspeople, however, had been accustomed to see the girl in company with her dark skinned companions, rollicking about among the sand hills, and who had vainly conjectured the reason of her being with them, noticed the couple as they passed down Bowery street, opposite the Ocean House, but thought nothing of the circumstance.

They were again seen at the depot of the Old Colony Steamboat Company, on Long Wharf, just previous to the arrival of the steamer 'Providence,' on her way from Fall River to New York.

In the meantime the squaws arrived home from their hard and toilsome day's labor, only to find that little Charlotte Wyeth, for that was her name, was missing. Upon inquiry of the other children the above facts were gleaned. They immediately proceeded to the station house, wild with grief, and informed the police of the fact, but it was of no use, for the child had gone probably forever.

The 'Herald' correspondent called at their tent this afternoon, but their inability to speak English distinctly rendered his visit void of success, save the gleaning of the facts above mentioned. He could plainly see, however, the sincere grief of those ignorant women, especially the one who had promised to care for the child, and for whom, she informed your correspondent, her tribe and her husband as well, could hold her to strict account when she returned home. She imagines that many of the white people in Liverpool, who knew all about the child, will believe that she has either sold or murdered her; as she uttered these words her grief was heartrending.

There are various opinions in regard to the motive of the kidnapper the most probable of which is that its unnatural father, repenting of his folly and knowing the ultimate fate of the girl if left in her present condition, determined to undo what he had done in an unthinking moment, followed the Indians to this place, and seeing a good opportunity, took possession of the girl. At all events her fate can be no worse than it was in her relation to the Indians, not but what they were as kind to her as they knew how to be, but their barbarous mode of living was never intended for this poor unfortunate waif.

While here she was obliged to fare the same as her guardians, having as a bed the cold ground, while through the top of the tent the stars could plainly be seen. The many who visited the beach were drawn by sympathy to her, and many were the pennies that were dropped into her snow white hands.

The police have the matter in charge, but do not believe their efforts will be successful in finding a clue to her whereabouts, and the affair will doubtless for ever remain a mystery, and the fate of little Charlotte be known to but a few.

LEVITIES.

The best smelling committee would be an hose company.

"Going out drowning?" is the question put to bathers at the beaches now-a-days.

A man who saw a Milwaukee car for the first time, imagined himself the frontier of Rhode Island.

"Melancholy, Slow"—Conductor: 'Look alive, Bill! Here's an old gent inside's afraid he won't ketch his funeral."

One point of difference between a timid child and a shipwrecked sailor is, that one clings to its ma and the other to its spar.

A mathematician being asked by a wag, 'If a pig weighs 240 pounds, how much will a great boar (bore!) weigh?' he replied 'Jump into the scales, and I will tell you immediately.'

A Pennsylvania boy got so homesick that he walked 78 miles without eating, in order to sit down once more at the family hearthstone. He was received with such warmth by his male parent that it was several days before he could sit down anywhere.

The London Herald has been trying for some time to discover the reason why young men wear black hat-bands on white hats when they are not in mourning for any friends or relations. It has at length arrived at the conclusion that they are worn in memory of their lost brains.

A Job's Comforter—Maud: 'O, Uncle George, I can see at least three gray hairs on your head!' Uncle George (with sentiment,) 'Ah, my dear, all my hair be will gray[illegible]' Ethel: 'Never mind dear Uncle George! there's no very little of it that it won't much matter!'

EAT BEFORE EATING.—Everybody knows that a season of rest after dinner pays well, but it is not more important than the rest before eating if one is weary. This rule is of the utmost importance to 'business men,' or the person engaged in brain labor, and its violation is one of the chief causes of our natural dyspepsia—this and the rapid eating that is customary. People of strong and unimpaired constitutions (if any such can be found) may not feel how impossible it is for the body to carry on the business of digestion when greatly fatigued or while it is being put to hard labor in some direction; but such is the case, and the health of our citizens is all the time being destroyed for the lack of knowledge on this point. The stomach must have some energy or nerve force to do its work with, and if the body has been using this vigorously, with the muscles or with the brain, a little time should be allowed for gathering up its energies for the task of digestion.

SHELF OF SEA SHELLS.—I've just heard of very wonderful things. The houses and churches and palaces of the big cities beautiful city of Paris are almost all made of sea shell! This is how it happened: Some hundreds of thousands of years ago, the waters of the ocean rolled over the spot where Paris now stands. Under the ocean waves lived and died millions and millions of tiny sea shell animals. By and by, after a great, great many years, the ocean waters no longer rolled over this spot, and the very, very big piles—I might say, indeed, the mountains—of dead shells were left for the sun to shine on, the winds to blow on, and the rains to fall on for
