THE RUSSELL CONTEST.

We rejoice to see that the Ministeria party in Russell have at last admitted the anomalous position in which they placed themselves by keeping three candidates in the field, while their opponents had wisely resolved to sink their difference and forego their personal aspirations for the purpose of concentrating their force upon one man. While Dr. Ferguson con tinued in the contest, as the nominee of the majority at the Convention, we gav him a loyal and hearty support, and had he considered it his duty to continue it the field, we should have given him that support to the end. We believe the doctor to be a gentleman in every way fitted to make an excellent member o the Legislature, and regret that circum stances were such that his withdrawal from the contest became not only prudent but necessary. Having given him our allegiance, however, we see no réason why that allegiance should not be transferred to the candidate in whose favour he has retired, and accordingly we are prepared to advise all our friends in the County of Russell who would have sup ported Dr. Ferguson had he gone to th polls to go in and secure the victory for

Mr. Morgana

We must also acknowledge that M O'Hanly has done a graceful and a creditable act in retiring when he was con vinced that to persist in going to the polls would not have helped his own case, and would be a weakness to the party of whose principles he has been a life-long advocate. things in connection with this same contest which we regret, and could scarcely be blamed if we condemned; but we are convinced that the feelings which inspired him in these instances were the product of the moment, and are ere now heartily repented of. This last act should go a fair way to restore him in the confidence and esteem of his friends and political him had he gone to the polls will also be east for Mr. Morgan.

great and sacred cause of temperance. The only aid that cause can legitimately desire from it is what is incidental to the faithful work of government in protecting person and property. And what say I of lager beer? Happily I neither know nor simply stupefying, I would not have Government class it with dram-shop drinks and therefore forbidden drinks. Let me lager beer be or be not intoxicating () suppose it is only slightly so, unless the drinker be a very behemoth) I would not I was at St. Louis, and although it was nearly twenty years ago, I have not yet lost the very pleasant impression it made upon me. Families seated quietly around small tables, with nothing on them but a pitcher of lager beer, goblets, and a plate of cake, contrasted so widely with the noisy and mad whiskey-drinkings of the Yankees and Irish, that my rigid total abstinence relaxed if not into an approyal, at least into the toleration of the scene before me. This usage of fatherland, so dear to the heart of every German, has strong claims to forgiveness and favour if over against its many pleasant features there be one that is to be regretted. The friends of temperance are very numerous and very honest. They have failed in their political action simply because they have grasped at too much and exacted more from Government than it has the right to render. Government will never prohibit all traffic never be guilty of such an invasion of the domain of individual liberty. The Prohitemperance be content to ask of the Government only so much as the Government has the right to grant. Let the temperance men come together on this sure ground, and stand there at the elections, and the accessions to them will soon make them the majority.
