Two of the Stock Trains bound east, left last evening by a special arrangement, though fifteen other trains made up, had to remain, and no freight trains have as yet left for the east or west. This morning there are now about twenty long trains lying in the yards awaiting hands to run them. The trainmen at Brockville have also struck. The superintendents are endeavouring to induce the men to return to their work, but so far without success. An official says they will all be discharged unless they come to terms. A number of the trackmen and labourers also threaten to leave, but as the road has a very large staff of this class of employees, the officers are quite prepared to see a few resign. The reason assigned for the lowering of the salaries, is that the road is not paying so well as it should. The engineers have not yet been notified of a decrease in their pay, and the officials state that the whole matter is under consideration.

Weather extremely cold, the thermometer registered 23° below zero yesterday morning.
