The Times.

OTTAWA, MONDAY, JUNE 7, 1875.

THE ALLEGED EXCHANGE OF PORTFOLIOS.

Referring to the statement, which has been given so much currency to, that Mr. Blake was first sworn in as Postmaster-General, but on the same day exchanged portfolios with Mr. Fournier and was sworn in Minister of Justice, also to the unqualified contradiction thereto, the Mail says—

"It is a remarkable fact that while some of the organs are indulging in the statement that Mr. Blake was not sworn in as Postmaster-General and Minister of Justice on the same day, Mr. Blake, who ought to know best, made no reference to the subject in his nomination speech on Wednesday. It is quite characteristic of the Toronto Globe and Ottawa Times to attempt to fasten the paternity of the statement on the Mail, but we would again refer to their memories by reminding them that our Ottawa correspondent adopted it from Senator Fabry's paper, L'Espresso, which said it was 'authorized' to make the statement. What a pity, now, that Mr. Blake did not contradict the Mail in public. When he begins to refute all the unfounded statements regarding his conduct, which appear in the columns of that journal from day to day, he must prepare himself for loss of extra work. It was perfectly unnecessary for him to give this particular charge a denial, it had already been authoritatively contradicted. The Mail, since it advises others to read their memories, might itself do so, with great advantage. If its Ottawa correspondent 'adopts' the statement in question from L'Espresso, it would have been more courteous to have given the latter journal credit for it while it was believed to be true than to do so now that it is known not to be true. The correspondent not only did not mention authority, but permitted the readers of the Mail to read under the impression that the publication of the fact was owing either to his indefatigable efforts or to the peculiar facilities he had for obtaining news of that nature; and the Mail, in the same issue, repeated the statement editorially, explicitly avowing its Ottawa correspondent as its authority, not even mentioning that it originated with a Ministerial journal. The Mail further says: 'The question of the Ottawa Times one side, and L'Espresso on the other.' If the Mail will examine the columns of Saturday's Ottawa, it will find the following translation from an article in L'Espresso, after the latter journal was 'in a position to state the facts with complete exactness':— 'When Mr. Fournier arrived at Ottawa, Mr. Blake had not been sworn in, but it was understood that the latter would 'would enter the Government as Postmaster-General, and it was only after a conference with Mr. Fournier that the change was definitively decided upon.' It is to be hoped that the Mail will satisfy the prominence which Opposition journals have given to this subject must appear to the uninitiated public, somewhat unaccountable. If the reason must be told, however—and there is no good cause why it should not—it is because there is really nothing else in a political way to write about. Mr. Blake has come to their relief now, not by denying what they most recently charged him with, but with a speech. It will take some time to pick that speech to pieces.

BOOK NOTICES.

The Edinburgh Review for April (reprinted by the National Scott Publishing Co., 11 Barclay Street, N.Y.), is now ready. Contents as follows:— I. New Series of Wellington's Despatches. II. The Geology of India. III. Malouet's Memoirs—State of France. IV. Modern Architecture and its Assailants. V. Reminiscences of William Mackenzie. VI. Arctic Exploration. VII. Supernatural Religion. VIII. Kinglake's Battle of Inkermann. IX. Papi Rome and Catholic Reform. X. 'Wellington Despatches' furnish the material for an account of the Duke's career from the battle of Waterloo to his death; and here, in a few pages, we have a short narrative of many curious and important transactions, which, besides throwing light on the political history of the period, illustrate his clear good sense, manliness, and patriotism. In Article II, we find a comprehensive review of the geology of India; and the effect of the soil and climate of the country have had upon the various races scattered over the Indian sub-continent. The third article is divided into two parts—first, a 'Sketch of the life of Malouet,' who was one of the National Assembly at the time of the revolution, and was recognized by Louis XVI. as 'one of the most sincere and constant of his friends'; and second, a comparison between the National Assembly of the great revolution and that of the present. The paper on 'Modern Architecture' explains how the civilization of a country is exhibited by its edifices, and that architecture, which is both a science and an art, can all be traced to the three elements, the soil, the climate, and the character, and its various and beneficent memory.—Western Catholic.

MARRIAGE OF GEN. SHERIDAN.

It is only recently that the fashionable world of Chicago was in a fever of excitement over the marriage of a daughter of General Sheridan—an event attended with more éclat, perhaps, than any of a similar nature happening in the United States. The other day the General himself led a youthful and blushing bride to the altar of hymen, and Chicago was again exceedingly excited. On Thursday last he was married to Miss Irene Kellard, of Chicago, at the residence of the bride's father, in that city, by the Right Rev. Dr. Foley, Roman Catholic Bishop of the Diocese. The General is forty-two years of age, and she who is now his wife is barely half his age, being in her one and twentieth year. The high rank which the bridegroom naturally makes such an event as his marriage of very considerable importance; the disparity between his age and that of the lady of his choice adds to the interest with which it is regarded; and the somewhat romantic history of the courtship forms, perhaps, the crowning effect. It was not a lengthened courtship by any means, but it was begun under somewhat extraordinary circumstances—one would naturally conceive them inauspicious. It was when General Sheridan went down to New Orleans, less than a year ago, to fight

FATHER MARQUETTE—A MEMORABLE ANNIVERSARY.

The 10th May, 1875, (some historians have it the 18th) the great soulful, visionary and intrepid explorer, Father Marquette, breathed his last and expired with the sacred names of Jesus and Mary upon his lips, on the opposite shore of Lake Michigan. Amongst the heroic and illustrious names of the past, the name of Marquette stands out prominently. He was a Frenchman, and his life and labors, his faith and his courage, have been handed down to us in many a page of eloquent and appreciative eulogy. The pen of Professor Sparks has been employed in portraying the arms and biography of Marquette, and in many a page of eloquent and appreciative eulogy. The pen of Professor Sparks has been employed in portraying the arms and biography of Marquette, and in many a page of eloquent and appreciative eulogy.
