Fire.-About two o'c'ock this morning a fire took place in the tailor's shop of Messrs. Gagne & Co., on Wellington street, next door to Mr. Langford's drug store. The flames spread rapidly from the first mentioned store to the latter, and fore a good streem of water could be brought into play, a considerable amount 54 of damage was done, both to the stock 54 and building. The fire seems to have or 53 | iginated underneath the staircase in the 53 second story of Mr. Gagne's establish ment, and thence it worked its way through to Mr. Lang'ord's. So soon as the firemen got to work they made short work of extinguishing the conflagration, and although more damage was done by water than by fire, still it was by the prompt action of the fire brigade that a serious fire was averted. As it is, both the gentlemen named will be severe losers, Mr. Langford especially, as from fragile nature of his stock, both in drugs and fixtures, the water thrown has of necessity created much havoc. The fire on the staircase in Gagne's premises communicated rapidly with Mr. Langford's, and burning a hole through the floor, rendered at one time the chance of raving the block somewhat doubtfulprevented a serious calamity, the residents of the neighbourhood worse than they were. Mr. Gagne is insured in the "Provincial" and his loss icy; Mr. Langtord is also insured, but to

One morning she left

Boston on the first train, after receiving a promise from her husband that he would soon join her. About 2 in the afternoon she reached, as she thought, her place of destination, but upon inquiry found that here were five hours ride by stage in store for her. This announcement quite nettled her, as in giving directions is fact had not been mentioned, but she engaged passage on the stage, which proved to be a twoseated waggon, on which she started off alone, with one of those good-natured though rough stage drivers often found in the country, who know everybody's business, telk with their passengers as though they were old acquaintances, and persist in asking questions until they have learn ed their names, where they are from, where they are going, and how long they intend to stay. He at once entered into conversation with Mrs. A., in the usual style, and when he learned where she was going, and for what purpose, he gave a ow whistle and said, "Wal, I guess I can reckon on you as a passenger back toenough I spose, but it is the lonesomest place you ever saw." Upon being informed who the new comer was, the farmer said, "Wal, now, haint that tu bad? We didn't think you'd come so soon, and my old woman has gone away; but never mind, she'll be here in the morning. Before the driver left the lady spoke low, and charged him not to forget her on the morrow, for she should return with him. When left alone with the farmer, he invited her into the house and showed her supperless to her room but what a room it was-no carpet on the floor, no paper on the walls, nor a lock on one of the doors. As soon as she was left alone she threw, herself on the bed and cried until she fell asleep. When she rose the next morning, she saw a female form gliding about the house, and upon inquiry learned to her horror that she had been left alone in that great house all right, while the host drove twenty miles away after his old woman."
