The Times.

OTTAWA, TUESDAY, SEPT. 14, 1875.

Mr. Sandford Fleming returned to the city last night from the Maritime Provinces.

His Worship Mayor Feather[illegible], who was a passenger by the steamship Sarnian, will reach Ottawa this morning by the steamer Queen Victoria from Montreal.

His Lordship the Bishop of Ontario has been registered as one of the visitors in the library of the Canadian Agency in London for the week ending first of September.

Mr. G. W. Ross, M.P., left by the two o'clock p.m. train yesterday for Montreal to attend the great temperance convention, which begins its deliberations in that city to-morrow.

M. Prieur, formerly a director of penitentaries under the old system, who was lately superannuated, left this afternoon with his family for St. Polycarp Quebec, where he will take up his residence.

The following persons are recorded as having visited the library of the General Agency in London in the last week in August:—Messrs. J. Travers Lewis, of Ottawa; F. W. Kerr, and John Montgomery, M.D., of Toronto.

We publish this morning the first instalment of a story—a Canadian tale, written by a Canadian of some literary repute—to which we direct the attention of our readers. It is the aim of the publishers of this journal to produce a newspaper which will continue in the future as it has been in the past, to be a desirable daily visitor to the family and fireside. It is with this idea that the publication of a story has been commenced. It is to be hoped that its merits will be such as to render any further introduction, rather, to the writer or his creation, unnecessary. We will vouch in advance that its tone shall be unexceptionable: as to its success, time and the reader shall be left to judge.

DR. McCOSH'S SUCCESS IN PRINCETON.

Dr. McCosh, the venerable and esteemed President of Princeton University, who has completed the seventh year of his connection with that institution, has just been giving a very interesting account of his stewardship. He begins by reminding the students of the physiological theory that every particle of matter in the body is renewed every seven years, and he thinks by an analogous course of reasoning that he may now fairly consider himself an American, which he declares he feels every inch. He disclaims, in offering a short review of the progress of the University under his guidance, any desire or intention to demand any merit for himself or his colleagues, except that they have devoted themselves thoroughly to their work. To those who by their wise counsels and liberal benefactions had sustained and encouraged the institution, all the credit of its success belonged, he contended, and in proof of what had been done in this way, he quoted the fact that about $1,250,000 in the shape of donations had been received within the seven years. The number of buildings had been doubled, two fine museums completed, and over $4,000 worth of books had been added to the library. There were six new professorships established, and twelve new branches of study in the various departments of science and literature. The status of the University had been raised, and so had the standard of the entrance examinations, and an extensive system of fellowships and prizes inaugurated, to which about $5,000 a year had been devoted. One hundred and seventy-four students have up to the present, this year applied for entrance, which was not anticipated in view of the greater difficulty of passing the examinations, and more are expected to come yet. Half a million more money is wanted to complete the plans which have been laid, part of which are the addition of two professorships, a tutor, and the necessary buildings, but where the money is to come from the venerable principal says he does not yet know. However, he feels certain it is going to come, and he points to the fact that whereas in the past the greater proportion of the funds contributed have gone to the erection of new departments, in the future they will be aimed solely at the direct promotion of learning. The record is a good one, and the experience of the past fully justifies Dr. McCosh's hopes of liberality towards the college on the part of the American public.

HON. MR. GEOFFRION.

Mr. Geoffrion, who has been hovering between life and death for the past three weeks, is likely, according to the latest accounts, to be spared to further usefulness. The utmost sympathy has been expressed on all hands for the friends and family of the hon. gentleman than whom there is no more popular man in public life on either side of politics at the present day. His case has been most critical, especially during the last week, when every hour the public and his own physicians expected he would breath his last. Yesterday and the previous day, however, the symptoms have been more favourable, and there is now hope that under Providence his recovery is assured. It was with pain and horror Conservatives learned that a journal published in their interests in Montreal had the indecency to speculate upon the changes which his prospective removal by death might necessitate in the Government of the country—an outrage upon the feelings of the family which no precedent could excuse and no course of reasoning could serve to palliate. We had hoped that the Minerve, the newspaper which was guilty of this unfeeling conduct, would have offered some apology to the public, which was the very slightest reparation that could have been made in the circumstances. The conductor of a newspaper might be led into committing an indiscretion of that kind without meaning any injury, and without having actually realized the offance against decency he was committing; but having made the unfortunate error, no gentleman would have refused or neglected to express his regret for it; and, notwithstanding political asperities, we believe that the conductors of the organs of public opinion in Canada are, as a rule, sensitive and high toned gentleman. Unfortunately, however, we have not seen or heard of any apology on the part of the Minerve, and are therefore forced to some conclusions which had probably better not be expressed. Attention may also be directed to the fact that, out of the many English Conservative journals in Canada, only one was found to follow the example of the Minerve, and that one in Ottawa. We can scarcely credit the assumption that the action of our contemporary was so entirely heartless as it looks to be. We rather regard it as one of the results of that silly disposition to "reconstruct" the Cabinet, which the organ in question has for some time manifested. The attempt to excuse the offence would scarcely be worthy of a man of honour in his private capacity, and when a newspaper draws aside the veil that shields any family from the vulgar public gaze, and speculates upon the probable results of the life and death struggle of the person whose privacy is invaded; no empty platitude about the good qualities of that person or the estimation in which he is held will turn aside from it the indignation and resentment of all right-minded people, or compensate afflicted relatives for the shock given to their tenderest and most sacred feelings. The Montreal Gazette, believing also that these disgraceful discussions have arisen from thoughtlessness, is yet as strong as language permits in condemnation of them. The Gazette, among other things very pertinent and in good taste, says:—"There is an apparent want "of feeling in this, which cannot but be "shocking to the friends of the honourable gentleman, and which almost "creates the impression that our political dissensions are of so bitter a character "that even the grave itself cannot make us forget them. We should be sorry to believe that this was true of any of our contemporaries. We prefer infinitely to believe that the illness which has prostrated Mr. Geoffrion is as much regretted by those who differ from him in political opinion as by his party and political friends; and that all unite in the earnest prayer that it may please God to restore him to health, and to his family and his country.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN KELLEY.—We chronicle this week the death of one of our oldest, most popular and most respected citizens, Capt. J. R. Kelley, born at Prescott, A. D., 1828. There are not many who leave behind them so large a circle of attached and sorrowing friends. As captain of one of the Royal Mail Line of steamers for many years, he enjoyed a wide acquaintance with the travelling public, and was both a popular and experienced commander. His frequent exposure to stormy weather in the discharge of his duties brought on a severe attack of rheumatism, under which his constitution sank after eighteen months of painful sickness, borne with much patience. He died on Sunday morning last, the 5th inst., leaving besides his numerous friends, a widow and six children to mourn his loss. They have the sincere sympathy of all in their bereavement.—Brockville Recorder.

Different Ways of Stealing.

MODERN THIEVES OF THE SHARPER CLASS.—EASY MODES OF MAKING A FORTUNE.—BY BISHOP CLARK OF RHODE ISLAND.

[From Mr. Bonner's New York Ledger.]

There are twenty seven names by which the vocation of a thief is designated. In modern times we have invented a new set of titles—such as repudiator, defaulter, and defalcator—as descriptive of some of our more popular modes of cheating. Give to any vice a gentle name, and it is said to lose half its grossness. And so, instead of using the good old Saxon, which meant something, even if it was coarse, we say of one who has robbed the bank, that "there is a deficit in his accounts," and of the man who spends money that does not belong to him, that he is "obliged to compromise with his creditors." I do not think that there is much gained by this. Carrion meat may be called high, but it does not smell any sweeter for that. If a man has robbed me, I do not feel any better to be told that "he has appropriated my property to his own use." Let us call a spade a spade, an infernal rascal a rascal, and we shall know better where we stand.

If I should enter into details upon all the various modes in which we are now cheated, I could fill all the forty columns of the Ledger. As it is, I shall confine myself to a few, which are just now most prominent.

Highest in the scale of thieves, and altogether the most respectable, is the professional burglar, who calls his vocation by no fictitious name, and is prepared to meet the consequences fairly and squarely, if he happens to be caught. He has probably been trained to his business from childhood, and as a matter of taste prefers it to any other. A lawyer in London once asked the captain of a band of English burglars if, with his skill as an accountant and other accomplishments, he could not do better by earning his living in some honest way; to which he replied: "Certainly, sir; was it not upon the whole a paying business? but do you suppose that it is the pecuniary return which makes it attractive to me? by no means; it is the pleasure that I take in bringing my wits to bear, so as to circumvent the plans of others for the preservation of their property."

The elevation of burglary to the rank of a mental science is somewhat novel, but the intellectual pre-eminence of the professional robber may be justly disputed by the accomplished swindler, who never breaks a lock or strikes a blow or uses a tool. House breaking requires only a certain amount of mechanical skill, but to get possession of another man's property by hoodwinking him, or playing upon his feelings, it is necessary that one should study something more than the mysteries of iron bolts and bars. Take, for instance, the mendicant thief—not one of the ragged regiment of beggars who are always ready to pilfer whatever is not to be had in other ways—but a well-dressed traveller, who has lost his wallet or had his pocket picked, or failed to collect a bill upon which he relied to meet the expense of his journey. Now it is only by the exercise of considerable ingenuity that any of these stale devices can be made effective.

A pleasing young man with an inimitable address, calls upon me in some such distress, and asks for a simple loan of ten or twenty dollars to reach his home. "Now," he adds, "I have been sufficiently familiar with clergymen to know how liable they are to be imposed upon by such stories as mine, and for this reason I would not like to take the money without leaving in your hands a few books which I brought with me from home as security for the loan." "What are the books?" I inquired. He then mentioned the titles of three or four religious works of the highest character lying at the hotel in his trunk, such as only a very good man would be likely to read, and the bait took. The youth kept his books—if he ever had them—obtained the loan, and that was the last I ever saw or heard of him. This is a very ordinary specimen of the ingenious deceipts by which the tribe of mendicant swindlers obtain a living.

Cheating the Government by evading the payment of duties and taxes, by smuggling, and buying goods known to be smuggled, and various other modes of fraud, is popularly regarded as a somewhat venial crime. So far as the abstract morality of the deed is concerned, I do not see the difference between putting my hand into the public treasury and taking out a hundred dollars that do not belong to me and abstracting the same sum from my neighbour's pocket. The derangement of certain branches of trade, as well as the loss of revenue occasioned by this evil, have recently aroused public attention, and the conviction of a few conspicuous criminals may tend to abate the fraud.

The rascalities of contractors have never been exceeded or equalled in any former generation. One fat job is a fortune, and an easier way to make a fortune can hardly be conceived. Only get the papers signed, secure the money, and underlet the work at half price, and the thing is done. How the work will be done, and with what sort of materials, is another matter.

Of the numberless other ways in which the community are cheated, the formation of stock companies based upon a tissue of lies, where the little savings of hard-working men and the patrimony of orphans and widows, are systematically swallowed up—railroad bonds, floated for a while by large dividends, paid with borrowed money, by which honest people are enticed to invest their capital, and where it soon sinks out of sight forever—certificates issued by ex-governors, senators, and foreign ministers to beguile the unwary into some valueless scheme—of all this I have no room to write.

This, however, is the conclusion of the whole matter. Fraud is the crying sin of the nation, in high places and in low places. The freedmen deposit their earnings in a national savings bank, and their money is filched from them. Yes—place your funds in the hands of a respectable citizen, and suddenly he is off for parts unknown. You buy a hundred shares of railroad stock guaranteed by the most saintly men, and secured by public lands, and find that it is not worth a penny. You hold a righteous claim upon the Government, and are obliged to sacrifice half the amount in order to obtain the moiety.

How long shall this state of things be allowed to continue?

Dr. Howe's Testimony.

PITTSFIELD, ME., March, 1872.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS.

DEAR SIR,—During the past two years I have given your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites a fair though somewhat severe trial in my practice, and am able to speak with confidence of its effects. In restoring persons suffering from emaciation and the debility following diptheria, it has done wonders. I constantly recommend its use in all affections of the throat and lungs. In several cases considered hopeless it has given relief, and the patients are fast recovering. Among these are consumptive and old bronchial subjects, whose disease has resisted the other modes of treatment. For impaired digestion, and in fact for debility from any cause, I know of nothing equal to it. Its direct effect in strengthening the nervous system renders it suitable for the majority of diseases.

I am, sir, yours truly,
WM. S. HOWE, M.D.

A man was complaining to some bystanders that he did not know what was the matter with his horses. He had tried everything he could hear of—Condition Powder and all other specifics—but to no purpose. They would not improve in flesh. A stable boy of Irish extraction, whose sympathies were aroused by the story, comprehended the situation, and modestly asked, "Did ye iver try corn?"

Description of the City of Ottawa, its principal points of attraction, scenery, manufactures and Public Buildings, together with the location, dimensions, etc., of the same.
Complete directory of the various Benevolent, Temperance and other societies, clubs of associations, with nights and places of meeting, for the convenience of visiting brethren.
Postal, Train, Steamboat and other information useful to travellers.
List of public meetings, entertainments, etc., in the city during the exhibition week.
The Government Buildings, the Library, locations of the several Departments and principal public offices.
The Patent Office,—special attention will be given to this important office and full information as to the most direct mode of transacting business therewith.

TO ADVERTISERS.

As twenty thousand copies of the "Exhibition Annual" will be in circulation before the end of Exhibition week, it will furnish an unrivalled medium for advertising. Its pages (the size of this prospectus) will be a large pamphlet form with colored paper cover, thus rendering it convenient for preservation and future reference.

The vast amount of information it will contain, and the fact, that it is in contemplation to maintain it as an annual publication in connection with the Ontario Exhibitions—adapting it to each locality wherein they are held—gives its advertising patrons virtually the benefit of a standing advertisement for a whole year.

From A. McNab, Esq., President of the Provincial Agricultural and Arts Association.

SIR,—I have no hesitation in giving your proposed Hand Book my hearty approval, believing it to be interesting to the public generally and particularly to the agriculturists of the Dominion, etc.
Yours, etc.,
ARCH'D. McNAB.
A. ROBERTSON, Esq., Ottawa.

From the Hon D. Christie, Speaker of the Senate, and late President of the Upper Canada Provincial Agricultural Association.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have read your letter with great interest and have pleasure in stating my hearty approval of your scheme to publish a "Provincial Exhibition Hand-book." It will be a work of real value to visitors to the Exhibition, as a reference. I hope you will meet with sufficient encouragement to justify a yearly publication of the Hand-Book.
I remain, yours very truly,
D. CHRISTIE.
ALEX. ROBERTSON, Esq.

Encouraged by the hearty approval of Mr. McNab, Hon. Mr. Christie, Hon. M. Cameron, Hon. Mr. Read, Ira Morgan, Esq., and many other gentlemen of distinction, I have prepared a copy-right, and under the title of the "Provincial Exhibition Annual," and intend to make of it a yearly publication in connection with our Provincial Exhibitions.
ALEX. ROBERTSON.
