The Globe's corres of thinking and acting. And in propor-knowledge of the press. It is doubtful how far these courts serve the purpose for which they were originally established which was to give an opportunity to prisoners detained upon evidence that, they or their counsel thought insufficient to establish the charge made against them, of having the matter disposed of without waiting for three months possibly, the sitting of the Assizes. An instance is given, for example, in which a person charged with areon elected to be tried without a jury, was brought before the Judge of Interim Sessions, and found guilty. The result of his crime had been the destruction of a large amount of property, much of it amassed by the owners after a life-time of perseverance and struggle against difficulty, who found paired energies and broken down spirits forced to commence the battle for existence anew. Yet the sentence imposed by the court was but three years' imprisonment-a punishment only a very little less inadequate than the one month imposed upon him who stole the $5,000 from his friend.

The Globe's correspondent also protests with considerable effect against the commutation of sentences pronounced upon persons guilty of the more aggravated forms of crime-a custom which is forthis country, and has seldom been resort--the historic "cat o' nine tails "-in a very appreciable effect in reducing the umber of these offences, if we do not entirely misapprehend the degree of terror which the accounts of its infliction will carry to the hearts of the criminally disposed. The abolition of capital pun shment is not without its advocates, them on the floor as the Globe's correspondent, says, "is a beautiful virtue, and mercy is " beautiful virtue; but while the law is extending mercy to one criminal clearly convicted of his crime, it is tempting on a hundred others to the committal of "the same crime. While a man is innocent he has his fate in his own hands "but once let him stain himself with " crime, he must suffer the penalty, or a hundred others will follows his example." There is no reason why we, in

We would probably stand comparison with any other civilized country with very favourable results; but our population is growing rapidly, and it will depend very is administered now and henceforth whether we shall go forward or backwardwhether by a judicious severity on the the part of those charged with the ad ministration of the law crime will be repressed and prevented, or whether A reply has been received by the City through false notions of clemency, or Engineer to the letter addressed by him rather with regard to its proper exercise to the Minister of Public Works, submit- it will be fostered and encouraged.
