You allude, Sir, in this address to one little cloud as overshadowing our political horizon-the position of the Roman Catholic population of New Brunswick in relation to the school question, and you express a hope that through the benign influence of Her Majesty the Queen their position may be ameliorated. I have no doubt, for my own part, that in New Brunswick, as well as in every por tion of the Dominion, all reasonable concessions will be made, so as to enable both the Catholics and the Protestants to unite cordially and to act harmoniously with each other in promoting the work they have both so much at heart-the cause of education.
